President Will Sign Bills, Blast Republicans

Messages to Form Part of Campaign; Taft Talk Follows Truman's Comment

President Truman plans to sign the housing and inflation control bills passed by the special session of Congress but with blistering statements denouncing the legislation as less than half measures which will not prove effective, one of his top aides said yesterday.

Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, meanwhile was holding up his comment on the 13-day special session which ended Saturday night after enacting only an infinitesimal portion of the 11-point program requested by the President. Taft said he would have his say after the President comments.

Mr. Truman, apparently under the impression that Congress would not adjourn until Tuesday or Wednesday, had left the White House and was cruising on the Potomac when the Congress he summoned back to a post-convention special session closed shop without voting most of what he asked for.

Far Short of Program

While the credit control and bank reserve bill fell far short of the price control, rationing, excess profits tax and other anti-inflation authority requested by Mr. Truman, his aide said the President would take the view that the bill passed can't do any harm though it probably won't do much good. He therefore will sign it and blast Congress for what he will charge is an ineffective measure.

The housing bill similarly was far short of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill Mr. Truman supported, but that, too, according to the White House source, is better than nothing, and therefore will be signed.

The President's strategy, it was indicated, will probably be to make his first post-session capital of Congress' inaction in his statements accompanying his signature. He will follow up with more general criticism in speeches and oral statements to follow.

Some Advised Radio

This, it was learned, is the course suggested by the White House staff. Some of the President's political advisers had toyed with the idea of having the President take to the air with a special address censuring the special session performance. This idea, one of Mr. Truman's political advisers said, was thrown back and forth but apparently has been abandoned.

When the members of Congress voted adjournment and rushed for home, they left behind them full action on only one of the 11 subjects on which the President had demanded action. That was the

1000-Ton Meteorite Hit Siberia, Soviet Scientists Report

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—An expedition of the Soviet Academy of Science is back in Moscow with a collection of eyewitness stories of a giant meteorite that fell in Siberia.

A Tass report distributed by the Soviet monitor said the expedition interviewed nearly 300 persons in 50 villages who saw the "shooting star" before it landed February 12, 1947, on a ridge north of Vladivostok.

"They all unanimously declared that the tail of the meteorite, the flight of which was visible for four or five seconds, was brighter than the sunlight in a cloudless sky on that day," said the report.

The body was said to have traveled 12 miles a second with a roar heard 125 miles away. Its weight was estimated at 1000 tons. The 30-square-mile area where the meteorite fell has been proclaimed a national reserve.

Plans Flight Alone Around World

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SOLO EFFORT—Dianna C. Cyrus, 25, of Santa Paula, Calif., will take off on a round-the-world solo flight between August 20 and 25, bent on capturing at least three records. Mrs. Cyrus will pilot a British Mosquito fighter-bomber. Her flight plan calls for a San Francisco to San Francisco time of 69 hours, 5 minutes, including only 5 hours on the ground for the entire trip. If she completes her mission, she will be the first woman ever to fly around the world solo.

Housewives' Meat Boycott Begins Today

Industry Skeptical As Many Groups Join Drive on High Prices

Chicago, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Budget-battered housewives over the Nation were set today to fire their most potent weapon at high meat prices—a one-week buyers' boycott beginning tomorrow.

Groups of irate women in dozens of cities spent last week telephoning other women and urging them to stay away from their butcher shops this coming week. Now they were ready to test their theory that if they refused to buy, prices would have to come down.

The originator of the "petticoat rebellion," 71-year-old Mrs. R. H. Vaughn of Dallas, said:

"I think our campaign will be successful, not only in Dallas but from coast to coast."

Meat industry leaders in Texas and elsewhere, however, were skeptical. They believed the rebellion would fail to bring substantial price reductions. They said many women would fail to join the boycott or join and then weaken and buy meat, anyway.

As the deadline approached, Mrs. Vaughn said she was "knee-deep" in letters and telegrams of support from other campaign centers over the country. The rebellion extended from California to New York and Wisconsin to Florida.

The combination of boycott and high prices was working a hardship on butchers themselves. The National Association of Retail Meat Dealers said yesterday "quite a few" butchers may be forced to close their shops because they no longer can make money. Twenty-five Los Angeles retailers planned to close until wholesale prices come down or customers buy more meat.

A survey of average livestock prices, not just the choice loads that sell at record levels, showed that meat-on-the-hoof today costs $2 to $10 more per 100 pounds than it did a year ago.

German Press Gibes At Secrecy on Berlin

Berlin, Aug. 8 (AP).—The German press gibed today at the secrecy surrounding Moscow negotiations over the Berlin crisis.

The American-licensed Tagespiegel published a cartoon showing a French newsman interviewing a diplomat in a Paris cafe.

Says the newsman: "Can you explain to me the policy of the Western powers?"

GOP Blocks Hundreds Of Nominees

Federal Officials Uncomfortable as Appointments Fail To Be Confirmed

By the United Press

The refusal of the Senate Republican leadership to confirm any of President Truman's appointments during the special session has left hundreds of Federal officials, including a new Secretary of Labor, in an uncomfortable position.

Most of them probably will continue to hold office and be paid under presidential "recess appointments." But some, notably military officers promoted to higher ranks, may not be able to draw their full salaries.

Top-ranking unconfirmed official was Maurice J. Tobin, former Mayor of Boston and former Governor of Massachusetts, whom Mr. Truman named Secretary of Labor Saturday night about two hours before the Senate adjourned. Tobin was nominated for a Cabinet vacancy which has existed since Lewis B. Schwellenbach died June 10.

At Boston, Tobin said yesterday he had not yet accepted his nomination and still was a gubernatorial candidate in Massachusetts.

"I am going to Washington within the next few days to visit the President and beyond that I have nothing to say," he added.

Adopt "Go Slow" Policy

Although GOP leaders adopted a "go slow" policy on all long term presidential appointments months ago in the hope that a Republican President would be in the White House in January, the Senate has previously acted without dispute on Cabinet appointments. But the Republican leadership announced as soon as the special session opened that they would not act on money bills or nominations at the "emergency" sitting.

Adherence to this policy right up to adjournment time meant that the following officials, among others, will have to be content with "recess appointment" status at least until January:

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service.

The United States delegation to the United Nations General Assembly session at Paris, including Warren R. Austin, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, John Foster Dulles, and Philip C. Jessup.

Edward H. Foley, Undersecretary of the Treasury.

Ernest Gruening, Governor of Alaska.

Others in Group

In the same boat are scores of customs collectors, district attorneys, U. S. marshals, postmasters and similar officials from coast to coast.

Chairman Chan Gurney of the Senate Armed Services Committee said it was doubtful whether they could legally be given a temporary status that would enable them to draw their higher pay until Congress goes through the two-minute formality of approving the list in January.

Univis Officials Turn Down Union Plan to End Strike

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Univis Lens Co. officials today rejected a proposal which would have ended a 96-day-old strike by the United Electrical Workers (CIO).

Univis President M. H. Stanley said that the "company saw no reason to continue sessions with a union which had been decertified." He rejected the settlement proposal which the union had accepted earlier today.

Union officials had said that if the company rejected the proposal they would call out the union membership to picket the plant

Winter Planning?

Air Chiefs Fly to View Berlin Lift

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—The ranking chiefs of the United States Air Force arrived here today for an on-the-spot check of the American flying supply line to Russian-blockaded Berlin.

W. Stuart Symington, Secretary for Air, and Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, chief of the air staff, flew here from the United States unexpectedly. They arrived in London during a weekend lull in the diplomatic maneuvering in Moscow toward Big Four talks to end the cold war.

The arrival of such high-ranking figures at this time aroused the immediate speculation in diplomatic circles that their purpose is:

1. To underline to the Russians the American determination to maintain and increase the air lift as long as the Russians continue to block the rails, highways and canals to Berlin from the western zones of Germany.

2. To plan for the future, including the coming winter, if agreement is reached at Moscow.

Symington and Vandenberg praised the work of American fliers, under the command of Assembly Fails to Act On Marie Bid

Communists Delay Action on New Powers for Premier

Paris (Monday) Aug. 9 (AP).—The French National Assembly adjourned late last night without completing action on Premier Andre Marie's bid for emergency economic and financial powers.

The debate will resume later today.

Yesterday and last night Marie beat off a series of Communist attempts to kill the government's financial reform bill. The Communists used delaying tactics during the special Sunday session called to debate the measure.

Following a plea by the Premier, the Assembly defeated, 386 to 201, a Communist motion to refuse to discuss the bill. Then, by 408 to 183, it rejected a Communist maneuver to refer the bill back to the finance committee.

The bill also was under fire from other parties, however. The Socialists, Popular Republicans (MRP) and moderates were not out to kill the measure, but want to amend it sharply.

Already amended out of the bill was the power Finance Minister Paul Reynaud had asked to increase business taxes when necessary. Also cut out were powers interpreted by many legislators as allowing the cabinet to decree antistrike laws. The government's power to order economies in the army also was limited.

Reynaud told the Assembly France has been kept going since the war only by "presents" from America. He warned that European Recovery Program dollars will not be available forever and that France must get back on her own feet.

Reynaud said "if the Americans suddenly got tired of paying 6 per cent of their taxes for European aid" France would lose 40 per cent of her raw material imports and 700,000 tons of cereals; her coal stocks would fall 15 per cent, oil stocks 80 per cent, and textile production would drop 65 per cent.

The Iron Curtain

Telegrams Show Ingenuity Of Soviet Spy Organization

By Igor Gouzenko
(Installment II.)

With Military Intelligence incorporated into Intelligence Headquarters, telegrams passed through my hands dealing with the service as well as civilian aspect of life in the Soviet.

And the astonishing ingenuity of its spy organization often awed me.

The Soviet has always had one advantage over similar organizations in countries such as the United States. That is its absolute ruthlessness. Murder is a legitimate weapon.

I saw one telegram that contained detailed instructions to the leader of a partisan group in the German-occupied territory of White Russia. These instructions dealt with lengthy organizational measures concerning a doctor, apparently a Russian, who had established himself as a collaborator with the Germans but, in reality, was serving as a Soviet agent. The doctor had been placed in a large barracks, housing some 1000 German soldiers, with the status of medical inspector. Intelligence headquarters now outlined in a businesslike, concise way how he was to poison as many troops as he could by putting strychnine in their dinner.

Shortly afterward, a brief telegram was sent to the same partisan leader congratulating him on "success of strychnine operation" and aiding the doctor's escape.

The episode made me realize that, in another war, the enemies of Russia will have to be prepared for the "epidemic" weapon as well as the atomic bomb.

Humanitarian ideals and ethics are absolutely foreign to the Kremlin. If the spreading of cholera in the Near East would affect England badly, whether Russia was at war or peace with England, I have no hesitation in saying full use of the germs would be made. The only thing that would worry the Kremlin would be fear that the action might be discovered. The deaths of thousands of people would not cause an iota of remorse in the Kremlin—one may be sure of that.

I often noticed a strange man in the Mexican section. I never saw him speaking with anybody. He used to sit typing reports and would leave without saying a word, disappearing for days at a time.

"Where does he go?" I once asked a veteran cipher clerk.

"He works with the agents," the other replied. "They live in summer residences near Moscow and don't dare appear at Intelligence Headquarters. There are some

Pastors' Day Of Mourning Hits at Draft

Nation Requested To Set Aside Day Of Repentance by Protestant Clergy

Ninety-nine Protestant clergymen in a protest against the draft, last night called upon the Nation to observe "a day of mourning and repentance" on August 22, a week before draft registrations begin.

The National Council Against Conscription, 1013 18th st. nw., released the plans for the protest.

In their statement, the clergymen said there are millions of citizens who regard peacetime conscription as a "dangerous and iniquitous measure."

Fear Power of Military

They charged that it has not been demonstrated that the measure is a military necessity and will not be a "waste of money in this age of atomic and bacterial warfare."

"It is a further step in the process, which already has gone too far, of placing the military in control of crucial areas of American life," the statement said.

The clergymen charged that the draft is a "provocative measure," and evidence that "the American Government is chiefly depending upon military might as an instrument of statecraft."

Signers of the statement noted that one group of clergymen has called for complete refusal to conform with the act, beginning with refusal to register. (This statement, signed by 16 ministers, was released May 21 by A. J. Muste of Philadelphia.)

They stated that (they "are not convinced of the necessity or wisdom of such an action," but contend that it would be "disastrous if peacetime conscription were accepted without protest and without constant witness against the evils which it entails."

"Day of Mourning"

They urged that the following points be emphasized on the "day of mourning":

1. The need for repentance for our shortcomings as a Nation, especially for our "dependence upon material wealth and military might rather than upon God."

2. The dangers of peacetime conscription.

3. The need for Nation-wide prayer for a general peace settlement and universal abolition of national armaments and conscription.

4. "The responsibility of young men not to give unquestioning obedience to secular authority," but "to decide each for himself the course he should take with regard to conscription."

5. An explanation of the provisions for conscientious objectors under the draft law and assurance to young men that the churches will support them in acting in accordance with conscience.

Signers Listed

Among those listed as signers were: J. M. Dawson of Washington, executive secretary of the Joint Conference Committee on Public Relations for the Baptists of the United States; Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick; Dr. George A. Buttrick, Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York; Dr. John Haynes Holmes, Community Church, New York, Bishop W. E. Hammacker, Denver area, Methodist Church, and Walter Mitchell.

Seek to Halt Jewish Influx

U. N. Peace Plan for Palestine Collapses on Arabs' Demand

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The United Nations plan to get Palestine peace through settlement of the refugee problem collapsed today when the Arab Higher Committee bluntly demanded that Jews on the Island of Cyprus be returned to Europe and further Israel immigration barred.

The Arab committee, it was learned, will warn the U. N. Security Council at its next meeting that Palestine's Arabs will allow no refuge to be given any Jewish displaced persons.

The committee spokesman, Jamal El-Husseini, will further charge that 550,000 Arab refugees, cut loose from their homes in the Holy Land by Israeli advances, must be returned before peace can be restored to the Middle East.

The case of the 10,000 Jews now in British detention camps on Cyprus has nothing to do with Palestine "and they must be returned to their country of origin or place of embarkation," Husseini wrote.

This newest ember in the smouldering Palestine fire was expected to be matched by an equally unyielding Jewish answer. Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok has made it clear the Jewish state cannot accept any huge Arab "fifth column" of refugees at this time.

Mundt Seeks Witness In Soviet Consulate; 2d Red Goes to FBI

Another Teacher In Russian Tangle Has N. Y. Interview, But Isn't Detained

New York, Aug. 8 (NYHT).—The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced tonight that Michael Ivanovitch Samarin, a Russian-born mathematics teacher, had called voluntarily this morning at its New York City office and asked to be interviewed.

Samarin is a figure in the cloak-and-dagger struggle between White and Red Russians which began Saturday when Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, another former teacher at the Soviet school here, reported that she had been "kidnaped" by White Russians. The FBI statemenet only added to the mystery. An agent said:

"He came to the office about 10 o'clock and asked for an interview. We gave him one just as we give anyone else who requests an interview."

Samarin Not In Custody

He declined to enlarge upon this or to disclose the present whereabouts of Samarin. He denied that the mathematics teacher was in protective custody, as had been previously reported.

"If you appeared at an office and requested an interview, would you consider yourself in custody?" he asked.

Samarin and Mrs. Kosenkina, 52, both disappeared separately on July 31, the day they were scheduled to sail for Russia with seven other teachers. Jacob M. Lomakin, Soviet Consul General, said on Saturday that Mrs. Kosenkina had been drugged by White Russians and that he had rescued her from a hideaway at Reed Farm, Valley Cottage, N. Y.

The report that Samarin had been taken into protective custody by the FBI was made by Police Chief Walter Liebert of the Clarkstown police, Nanuet, N. Y., who had been investigating the alleged "kidnaping" of the woman teacher.

Police Chief's Story

Chief Liebert said that he had learned that Samarin had been taken into custody at 4 a. m. on a platform of the Eighth Avenue subway, and had telephoned this information to Representative Karl E. Mundt, chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, who already had sought a State Department ruling as to whether the woman teacher could be subpenaed for questioning.

"I told Mr. Mundt," Liebert said, "that I had information from persons here that Samarin was going to fight to stay in this country."

(In Washington, Mundt, commenting on his telephone conversation with Liebert, said only that "we expect to follow through def-

Negroes to Vote On Tuesday in South Carolina

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—Negroes will vote generally in a South Carolina election Tuesday for the first time since 1876.

Their unrestricted votes—a predicted 30,000 out of possibly upwards of 300,000 ballots—will be cast in a Democratic primary to select a United States Senate nominee, six United States Representatives, State and local officers.

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond's presidential candidacy on the States Rights Democratic ticket will not be involved. The State Democratic executive committee already has pledged the eight South Carolina electoral votes to him.

Hoey Labels Impeachment Talk 'Politics'

Assails Ferguson's Truman 'Tirade' On Red Evidence

By The Associated Press

A Southern Senator snorted "politics" yesterday at a Republican threat to impeach President Truman for refusing Congress information.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) spoke several times of impeachment as he accused Mr. Truman in a Senate speech Saturday of an "iron curtain" policy, and assailed his refusal to turn over loyalty records in the Russian spy investigation.

But Senator Hoey (D., N. C.) declared that every President, starting with George Washington, has followed Mr. Truman's policy in withholding information on Government employes. Hoey spoke on the Ed Hart prgram over WINX.

He accused Ferguson of a "political tirade against the President." Ferguson said the President is trying to put "an iron curtain between Congress and the public business."

No White House Comment

Ferguson, who heads an Expenditures Subcommittee digging into reports of wartime Soviet espionage here, said Congress is being pushed into the position of "having either to legislate through a blind spot or compel the President to answer his conduct in an impeachment proceeding."

The White House had nothnig to say yesterday, but Ferguson, in a prepared statement, demanded to know whether Government agencies had ignored FBI warn-

Holding Gashed Throat Helps Save Own Life

Minneapolis, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Edward Courval, 29, Rogers City, Mich., was credited today with helping save his own life by holding his gashed throat together with his hands after an auto accident.

Precedent-Setting Decision

NLRB Orders Plasterers Union To Refund 'Featherbed' Wages

By the United Press

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ordered an AFL plasterers' union to reimburse a Los Angeles construction firm for wages paid to four employes for work they did not perform.

It was the board's first ruling under the Taft-Hartley Act ban on "featherbedding" practices by labor unions.

The board merely approved terms of an agreement, reached May 27 by representatives of R. H. Parr & Son, the construction company, and the Plasterers and Cement Finishers International Association. It did not indicate whether it would have ordered the same remedy in absence of the agreement.

Howard F. Lebaron, NLRB regional director at San Francisco, had issued a formal complaint against the union charging that it required the company to hire six men when only two were actually needed. The complaint said the union demanded and received compensation at overtime rates for six men for "work actually performed by two."

The agreement, arranged by representatives of NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham, stipulated that the union would repay the company "any money exacted for services which were not performed." The union also agreed to waive hearings in the case and issuance of a court decree enforcing the order.

The agreement also requires the union to post in its offices for 60 days this notice to all members:

"We will not cause or attempt to cause an employer to pay or deliver or agree to pay or deliver any money or other thing of value, in the nature of an exaction, for services which are not performed or not to be performed."

That is the language of the Taft-Hartley provision prohibiting unions from engaging in "featherbedding."

'Kidnaped' Woman May Be Subpenaed; Perlo, Koral on Stand Today, Currie Later

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The House Committee on Un-American Activities plans to subpena its "kidnaped" Russian witness right in the Soviet consulate in New York if the State Department rules it can be done.

This was disclosed yesterday by Chairman Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) after an unusual Sunday session of the committee. Mundt disclosed the State Department is making a check for both the committee and the FBI to determine if full diplomatic immunity extends to consulates as well as embassies.

Mundt said he had been informed, subsequent to July 30, that the witness, Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, who has been teaching in a school for Russian children, was willing to testify.

Awaits State Dept. Approval

The committee, said Mundt, has reason to believe that Mrs. Kosenkina can throw a valuable light on the whole situation regarding Communist espionage and intrigue.

Although the State Department is making the necessary check of international law, there is good reason to believe that the consulate will be ruled out of bounds as covered by diplomatic immunity.

Mundt made it clear that his committee would not act unless the State Department approves the move.

"If diplomatic immunity extends to the consulate," he said, "we are not going to waltz in and create an international incident."

White, Red Russians Differ

There are conflicting stories about whether Mrs. Kosenkina is at the consulate voluntarily or whether she is there under some form of duress. Soviet officers say they "rescued" her from a White Russian farm where she had been taken when drugged. The White Russians say she had fled to them in terror of her life.

The committee, Mundt said, is most anxious to get all the light it can on the operations of the espionage network because it has already become apparent that present laws are inadequate to deal with the situation in the modern world.

The New York grand jury investigation, resulting only in the indictment of 12 Communist leaders on charges of trying to overthrow the Government by force and violence, is proof of the need for better legislation, Mundt declared.

Present laws are so tightly drawn, he said, that proof must be made that information of such a nature as to "do damage to the national security" has been given to an enemy power. The situation

U. S. Population In 1947 Placed At 143,414,000

By The Associated Press

Boom growth of the Pacific Coast led the United States to an estimated population total of 143,414,000 in 1947, a rise of 8.9 per cent since the 1940 census.

The Census Bureau, in a report reflecting great migration between States, figured California's gain since 1940 at 42.1 per cent, Oregon's at 41.8 per cent and Washington's at 35.8 per cent.

These were the 1-2-3 States in population growth. Together the population rose by 3,981,000 or 40.9 per cent, to a total of 13,714,000. California, with 9,812,000 residents, edged closer to Pennsylvania as the second largest State. The big birth rate was the major cause of the Nation-wide increase. The excess of births over deaths accounted for a gain of 11,738,000, the Census Bureau said, with civilian immigration from abroad adding another 1,016,000.

But migration between States was a major factor in the shifts between regions. Thus, the net migration into the West (Mountain States and Pacific) was 2,900,000. This almost counterbalanced the movement from the South, a net out-migration of 2,996,000.

Between 1945 and 1946 all States gained civilian population. The District of Columbia, as war agencies were dismantled, was an exception. But the District was again on the upgrade in 1947.

A survey indicates the Census Bureau said, that 12,388,000 persons were living in a different State in 1947 than in 1940.

St. Laurent, Next Canadian Prime Minister, Made His Mark as Corporation Lawyer

Ottawa, Aug. 8 (AP).—The man who is to be Canada's next prime minister, Louis Stephen St. Laurent, is a 66-year-old former corporation lawyer who typifies what Canadians regard as a "scholar and a gentleman."

He was born in Compton, Quebec, small eastern township, in 1882, son of French-speaking Canadian J. B. M. St. Laurent, a country general store keeper, and Mary Broderick whose folks came from Galway Ireland.

He was reared and remains in the Catholic Church and says he also was raised in the Liberal Party faith.

Speaks 2 Languages

Gray-haired, brown-eyed with close-cropped mustache, St. Laurent is about 5 feet, 9 inches tall and fairly stocky. He speaks English and French with fluency, explaining that when he was a child he didn't know Canada had two official languages. "I just thought there was one way to talk to my father and another to talk to my mother," he said.

He was educated at St. Charles College, Sherbrooke, Que., and Laval University, Quebec City. He became a highly successful corporation lawyer and never gave thought to a political carrer until 1941 when he was 59—an age at which many men are thinking of retiring.

Retiring Prime Minister MacKenzie King brought him into the cabinet as Minister of Justice during this country's crisis over the conscription issue. He was made minister for external affairs at the end of 1946 when King divested himself of that job.

Changes Gestures with Language

St. Laurent at heart really remains a great corporation lawyer who is supposed to have given up a $100,000 practice to enter the government as a patriotic duty. He speaks like a lawyer and rather oddly changes gesture when he switches from English to French and vice versa. He is more reserved when speaking English than French.

Also at heart St. Laurent obviously is more French than Irish.

His first job when King turns over the reins to him will be to select a new cabinet. But he will probably rely largely on King's advice. King has said he is continuing for a while as Prime Minister to help his successor find his political feet. Indications are that will be around December.

St. Laurent has a wife and five children, all married.

Meet This Week

St. Laurent, King to Plan New Cabinet

LOUIS ST. LAURENT

Ottawa, Aug. 8 (AP).—Informed quarters expressed belief today that Louis Stephen St. Laurent will become Canada's Prime Minister in two or three months.

St. Laurent, present Minister for External Affairs, was elected leader of the dominant National Liberal Party on the first convention ballot late yesterday. This automatically makes him the successor to Prime Minister William Lyon Mackenzie King, who is retiring. The two will meet this week to discuss when St. Laurent is to take over the government and whom he will include in it.

The feeling here is that James Garfield Gardiner, the fiery little westerner who was runner-up to St. Laurent for the leadership, probably will retain the ministry of agriculture on the basis of his offer to continue his service to the party and nation. Brooke Claxton, 51, present Defense Minister, is the man most often mentioned as likely to get St. Laurent's present ministry of external affairs.

Political experts say that one thing sure is that the 66-year-old St. Laurent will bring into the government in the role of parliamentary assistant more bright young men. This would give recognition to the cry of young liberals for more recognition.

In yesterday's balloting, St. Laurent received 848 votes, Gardiner got 323 and C. C. Power, former Air Minister, 56.

Pro-Tito Press Lauds Soviet Danube Stand

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Two of the country's biggest newspapers, both of which supported Marshal Tito in his quarrel with the Cominform, today had high praise for the Soviet Union's plan for control of the Danube by Danube river states—except Germany and Austria.

The "independent" newspaper Politika said the Russian draft treaty, to replace the 1921 convention, freed the Danubian states from the political and economic influence of the imperialistic western states.

The Communist paper Borba, in an editorial headlined "Soviet Proposal Contributes to the Cause of Peace and International Cooperation," accused the Western powers—the United States, Britain and France—of trying to sabotage the Danube conference.

The convention is designed "to liquidate 'the acquired rights' of the non-Danubian states as well as their privileged position and affirm that the Danube is no longer a way to enslave the Danubian states, but instead is an important means of communication which serves the cause of peace and international cooperation," Borba said.

[United States Ambassador Cavendish Cannon told the conference yesterday that the United States intends to reject any Communist monopoly over Danube shipping, the Associated Press reported. It was also reported that the United States had withdrawn its draft treaty and accepted the Soviet draft as a basis for amendment. The United States action came after Yugoslavia agreed to withdraw part of a resolution of procedure which would have cost the Western powers the initiative in selecting their amendments.]

Greek Rebels Menaced by Army Pincers

Athens, Aug. 8 (AP).—A general staff spokesman said today the Greek army is relentlessly carrying the battle to retreating guerilla forces of Markos Vafiades along the entire Grammos Mountain front.

The national forces reached the Albanian border on both ends of the front, the spokesman said, and are maneuvering to encircle the area with artillery in an effort to trap Communist columns moving in the direction of Albania.

Three army columns crossed the Sarandaporos River moving north, he added, and other units which captured the village of Oxya are driving on toward the Prophet Eli. Height in the district.

Another column, on the western end of the front, moved on from Kaninka, and deployed along the Albanian border, the spokesman said. He said the army beat back one guerilla counterattack with the aid of Spitfire planes.

The guerillas' "Free Greece" radio broadcast an order of the day issued by Vafiades, which conceded the guerillas have withdrawn from several battle areas, but said they will make a firm stand on Grammos.

At Warsaw

U. S. Assailed By Youths of 50 Nations

Warsaw, Aug. 8 (AP).—About 1000 youths from 50 nations paraded through Warsaw streets today shouting "down with the Marshall Plan, down with American imperialism."

The parade was part of the Communist-backed International Conference of Working Youth, which opened at an auditorium in the heart of this Polish capital.

Twelve marchers carrying a United States flag joined in the shouts of the demonstrators. American representation is confined to Americans long in Europe, since the United States State Department denied passports to the officially elected delegation. The conference is to last six days.

Bert Williams, 29, of Sydney, Australia, a key organizer of the conference, said a world charter of youth's rights will be adopted Saturday.

The Polish press hailed the delegates as the "militant troops of the anti-imperialistic front."

Among the states represented are Italy, Britain, Czechoslovakia, France, Brazil Venezuela, Mexico, Belgium, the Netherlands, French West Africa, Denmark and Canada. The free German youth movement of the eastern zone sent five observers.

Amid a splurge of red flags and banners the delegates jammed Warsaw's Roma Auditorium chanting "Glory to Stalin" and cheering the Soviet Union as the bulwark of peace.

The six-da conference is presided over by Guy de Boisson of France, president of the World Federation of Democratic Youth.

Convention officers declined to reveal the names of the American group and assailed the State Department's denial of passports to American delegates as a "glaring example of the denial of democratic rights to youth."

Big 4 Facing Deadline on Italy Colonies

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—Libya is problem number one for the Big Four talks beginning here Monday on what to do with Italy's prewar colonies.

The deputy foreign ministers, representing Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union, have two weeks in which to report the results of an 11-month probe into the future of Libya, Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

They have heard the views of 19 governments who joined with the Big Four in signing the Italian peace treaty. They have sent commissioners to hear what the people of the African territories want.

The most serious point of conflict between the policies of east and west is over Libya, where the Allies' battles with the German Afrika Corps ebbed and flowed for three years.

Chances are the Big Four may be able to compromise on the future of Eritrea and Somaliland, where views coincide.

But unless the Council of Foreign Ministers agrees on the whole question by September 13, the U. N. General Assembly will inherit the problem, in terms of the Italian peace treaty.

Five eastern European states, following Russia's lead, have proclaimed themselves in favor of turning back all the colonies to Italy for rule under U. N. trusteeship. All insist, however, that the African peoples should be led to independence.

Envoys Await Kremlin Call For New Talk

By R. H. Shackford

London, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Russian fears that a Big Four Foreign Ministers Conference might spotlight cracks in the Iron Curtain may be a factor in slowing the current East-West negotiations in Moscow, diplomatic sources said tonight.

Speculation along this line was voiced as Moscow advices said the diplomatic envoys of the three Western Powers were awaiting a call to the Kremlin for a new talk with Soviet Foreign Minister Viacheslav Molotov.

It was understood that Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, American Ambassador, Yves Chataigneau, French ambassador, and Frank Roberts, British special envoy, had received new instructions from their governments as the result of the talks they had with Molotov Friday night.

The expectation was, according to Moscow advices, that the call from Molotov probably would come Monday after the Russians themselves had decided their course in the next exchange.

Feeling here and in Paris, and apparently in Moscow, was slightly less optimistic as to the immediate summoning of a conference of the Big Four foreign ministers to consider the Berlin crisis, German problems generally, and probably other European questions as well.

Questions which might be embarrassing to Moscow at the moment are the treaty to restore Austria's independence, the proposal of the western allies to restore Trieste to Italy and the future of the Polish-German boundary.

If the future of Trieste and the Austrian treaty were discussed, the split between the Cominform and Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia would be sure to become a factor.

very important people among them."

The agents on returning from abroad would go to one of the summer residences which were kept under constant guard. Even members of the Politburo used to go to talk with the agents in such settings; in fact, Stalin himself was not an infrequent visitor.

One day in 1942 a girl appeared in the adquarters dining hall who fairly took our breaths away. Everything she wore was from abroad and bore evidence of exceptionally good taste. She had a pleasant disposition and lovely figure. Her hair was blonde and her complexion milky. She laughed easily and nicely. Her face seemed the personification of complete innocence. She spoke Russian poorly.

Naturally we were all discussing her and it didn't take long to find out she was an agent of Soviet Intelligence temporarily returned from the United States. We didn't see her any more after September and presumed she had returned to America.

The entire main section of Intelligence Headquarters swarmed with all kinds of foreign specialists — Frenchmen, Englishmen, Americans, Germans, Bulgarians, Turks, Persians, Chinese, Japanese and others. Most of them had become Soviet citizens long ago. They apparently worked very zealously. Mostly they were employes of the Comintern, Communists from the countries of their birth. The majority were attached to the information branch. Some of the most dependable ones were even admitted to the operative sections, where they worked as agents.

I was astounded that foreign-born people could be trusted so freely but was told they had been tested and judged by results.

"Each such foreigner gives us more help than a hundred Russians—even our best-trained Russians," my informant stated. "Naturally he knows his own country."

The foreign-born workers were under strictest observation but so were we all. Their diligence never ceased to be a source of wonder.

I am convinced that they were sincere Communists in their own countries, and there is a very little in the way of a bridge between being a sincere German, English, American or Greek Communist and becoming a Soviet citizen. With Communists the world over, there is no basic loyalty except to Soviet Russia. That was proved in the spy probe in Canada when I showed that even an elected member of the Canadian Parliament, Fred Rose, was a Soviet agent.

Even in a democracy the Communist Party cannot be treated in a broadminded manner. They are enemies, working for a flag different from the one waving above them. They work under no code of ethics. They work without any humanitarian ideology to cramp their style. The end justifies the means in everything they do, and the end for Communists everywhere is advancement of the Soviet ideology.

To believe otherwise is to be an international dupe.

The much-discussed international exchange of students between foreign and Soviet Union universities was still another ingenious Red ruse for developing better trained spies. It was a made-to-order idea whereby young spies of tomorrow could actually be trained in the foreign countries they would eventually return to in spy roles under diplomatic guises.

Some foreign students had been accepted for study in the Soviet Union before the war, but they had been first investigated by Soviet agents in the country of their application. They had to be established Communists or sympathizers. They were constantly "guided" while in Russia, so that they saw only what would help make them even more eager agitators on their return home.

Meanwhile, much publicity was given their presence in Russia and the implication was always contained, both in the Soviet press and by "fellow-travelers" abroad, that such students were welcomed in large numbers. In reality, the total was never more than a handful. Many of them were used later as "contacts" during the war.

U. S., Soviet Expected to Clash In U. N. Today on Disarming

Lake Success, Aug. 8 (AP).—The United States and Russia are expected to clash again Monday over the question of arms reductions.

The discussions will be a resumption of one started last Monday when the United States made a surprise demand that the United Nations continue talks on slashing world armaments.

Russia's Jakob A. Malik asked time to get instructions from Moscow. Two meetings were set for Monday to permit a thorough airing of the question.

The working committee of the U. N. Commission for Conventional Armaments was called for 9:30 a. m. The commission itself will meet at 1:30 p. m.

In the past, Russia has taken the position that it is useless to discuss reduction of arms unless something is done about outlawing the atomic bomb. The U. N. Atomic Control Commission recently suspended its talks at the request of the Western powers.

Russian Paper Sees West as 'Reasonable'

(From Press Dispatches)

Berlin, Aug. 8.—Taegliche Rundschau, official newspaper of Soviet occupation forces in Germany, sounded a note of optimism today by saying that "increasingly reasonable remarks "were being made by "the most competent representatives of the western powers."

"In the highest and most responsible quarters of the western powers better understanding seems to be getting the upper hand," the newspaper said. "In Moscow negotiations have been initiated about which it is known only that they are of a serious character, and are being carried on for the purpose of settling existing differences."

As an example of the "reasonable remarks," the newspaper cited a statement which it attributed to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower that "only madmen want war." It also quoted President Truman as saying that he does not believe war is inevitable.

Taegliche Rundschau also expressed cautious optimism about the currency situation in Berlin.

The newspaper quoted Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, British commander as saying that he was "positively considering" approving the Russian currency for circulation in the western sector of Berlin. British authorities, however, denied that Robertson made such a statement.

A dispatch from Munich today said that Jacob Kaiser, who was ousted by the Russians as chief of the Christian Democrat Party in the Soviet zone, had blamed western allied statesmen for the postwar gains made by Russia in Europe.

"I am not going to ask why, after fighting one totalitarian system, another totalitarian system was granted so many chances in Europe," Kaiser told a crowd of 8000 in Munich. "This is something for which the statesmen of other countries are responsible."

The Russian-controlled press reported strong punitive measures against food hoarders in the Russian occupation zone.

Prison sentences are being dealt to farmers and distributors who conceal their stocks or divert them into the black market.

A food crisis in the Soviet zone was indicated.

Dispatches in western-licensed newspapers—which the Russians have not denied—have reported hunger demonstrations recently in many cities of the Soviet zone.

The Soviet military governor, Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, told the Germans of the eastern zone, that if they wanted more to eat they must produce more.

The Russian zone's current food troubles are believed to be in measure the result of the Soviet undertaking to feed the entire city of Berlin.

The drive against hoarders was disclosed by the Soviet-licensed news agency, ADN. It reported that near Halle, in Saxony, a farmer was sentenced to two years imprisonment, loss of his civil rights for three years and confiscation of all his property for slaughtering 21 pigs and selling the meat in the black market.

Another farmer was sentenced to four years in prison for the "economic crime" of concealing grain stocks. Other confiscations were made by so-called "people's control committee."

Russian police arrested "a number" of western sector law enforcement officers last night and German city authorities have demanded their immediate release, American sources reported today.

Some of those arrested were routed from bed and were not even allowed time to dress, it was stated.

The American-licensed newspaper Tagesespiegel said Soviet sector officers, under the direction of Kremlin-trained Paul Markgraf, swooped down on western officers who are living in the Soviet sector of the city. It said Markgraf's men had arrested several other western Berlin police since the east-west split divided the city's police force.

All those arrested were serving under Johannes Stumm, who was named police president by the Berlin magistrate.

Russian Official Rules on Biology

Moscow, Aug. 8 (NYHT).—A dispute between Soviet biologists regarding the laws of heredity has been resolved by Trofim Denisovich Lysenko, president of the Lenin All-Union Academy of Agricultural Science, with the approval of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, it was announced today.

One group of biologists upholding the Mendelian laws of genetics and the views of the American zoologist, Thomas Hunt Morgan, maintained that heredity and not environment is the basic force of nature. The other group, led by Lysenko, defending the views of the late Soviet biologist, Ivan V. Michurin, who was called the "Soviet Burbank," asserted that environment is the more important factor.

The dispute became so serious that it was brought to the attention of the Central Committee, which recently issued resolutions against "formalism" in music, literature and art. The central committee upheld Lysenko and his ruling in favor of the Michurin viewpoint as against those of the West.

During the past week, "Pravda," Communist Party organ, gave about half of its space to the biological issue.

Lysenko said the history of biology is a battle of two conflicting ideologies arising from two different worlds in the universe. He denounced the supporters of the Mendel-Morgan school for introducing into the Soviet Union "alien foreign bourgeois biology."

Supporters of the Morgan viewpoint, he said, "must admit we did not take advantage of conditions created by our party and government to denounce completely Morgan metaphysics." He announced that measures were being taken to correct the situation.

Witness Sought in Consulate investigated by the grand jury, he pointed out, deals with charges of wartime espionage when Russia and the United States were allies, and some of the information would not precisely jeopardize national security. In some cases the Russians had the same information from official sources. Nevertheless Mundt said, it was perfectly obvious that a way would have to be found to deal with persons giving unauthorized information out of this Government's files to another power. There have been legislative attempts before to deal with this situation, he pointed out, but the great stumbling block to legislation previously drafted and not passed is that it infringes upon freedom of the press.

May Amend Own Bill

Mundt said the committee may introduce separate legislation or may amend the House-passed Mundt-Nixon bill.

Meanwhile the committee will raise the curtain again here today on its study of the operations of Communist espionage in wartime Washington.

One witness today will be Victor Perlo, whom Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley identified as head of a Communist spy ring among Government workers. Perlo, a former War Production Board employe, was also named by Whittaker Chambers, a senior editor of Time magazine, as a member of an "elite" group of Communists in this Government prior to 1937.

Perlo Working for Wallace

When located in New York by committee investigators Perlo was working in the headquarters of the Henry A. Wallace Progressive Party.

Another of today's witnesses will be Alexander Koral, whom newspapers have dubbed the "mystery witness." Koral is an employe of the New York City Board of Education who Mundt said could lead the committee to the "contact" man for one of the spy rings. He was described as "a satisfactory and productive" witness.

The third witness will be Duncan Lee, an attorney, whom Miss Bentley described as a Communist who was one of her sources of information within the wartime Office of Strategic Services. She said that at the time she knew him he was one of the legal advisers to Gen. William Donovan. He had worked with Donovan, she said, in his law firm before the OSS was established.

Currie to Appear Wednesday

In newspaper statements Lee has flatly denied Miss Bentley's charges. He was a major during the war.

Wednesday or Thursday, Mundt said, the committee will hear those who have asked an opportunity to deny the charges made by Miss Bentley.

Most important of these witnesses will be Lauchlin Currie, former administrative assistant to the late President Roosevelt. Miss Bentley said specifically that Currie was not a Communist. She said he did give information to members of her ring, which was passed on to her, but she said she did not know Currie. She described the former administrative assistant as giving a breathless report that this Government was about to break the Russian code during the war. This was reported to her by Nathan Gregory Silvermaster, described by Civil Service and other Government agents as a probable member of Russia's secret police. Silvermaster testified that he appealed to Currie when Naval Intelligence tried to get him discharged from the Government.

The committee will also hear Dr. and Mrs. Bela Gold of Pittsburgh. Miss Bentley mentioned a William Gold and his wife, Sonia Gold, and the Bela Golds wired the committee for permission to testify in answer to her charges. Gold, now a college professor, worked in Foreign Economic Administration. Mrs. Gold became secretary to Harry Dexter White, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who now heads the Bank of Mexico with a salary of $25,000 a year.

Another witness who has requested to appear and deny charges, Mundt declared, is V. Frank Coe, secretary of the International Monetary Fund. He and William H. Taylor, assistant to the director of operations in the monetary fund, were named as members of a Communist spy ring by Miss Bentley. Both then worked under Harry Dexter White. Coe's salary is now $14,000 a year and Taylor's salary is $12,000 a year, both tax free.

Donald Hiss Submits Affidavit

M. H. Parsons, director of operations for the monetary fund, said that both Coe and Taylor are still in their jobs. Officials of the fund, he said, are taking the position that the men are innocent until proved guilty.

Mundt disclosed that Donald Hiss, former State Department official from 1938 to 1945, younger brother of Alger Hiss, has submitted a sworn statement taken under oath which he has asked the committee to put in the record. Hiss denies the charges of Whittaker Chambers, who said he and his brother, Alger Hiss, belonged to an "elite" guard of Communists in Government.

Donald Hiss, a Washington attorney, has also told the committee he would be available for questioning, Mundt said. The committee chairman said that since both Hiss brothers are involved through the testimony of Chambers, he will wait to call Donald Hiss until the committee presents more witnesses in an attempt to resolve the apparent conflicts between the testimony of Chambers and Alger Hiss.

Mundt said he planned to recess the hearings by the end of this week. He stated that before the recess, however, he believes the committee can and will resolve any apparent differences between the testimony of Alger Hiss and that of Chambers.

Also on the list of potential witnesses is Adolf A. Berle, jr., former Assistant Secretary of State, now head of the Liberal Party in New York.

Chambers testified that in 1939 when the Nazis signed a pact with the Russians he felt this Government, especially President Roosevelt, should have full information about what he knew of Communist activities within the Government. At that time, Chambers said, he had been out of the Communist Party for two years.

Accordingly he consulted Isaac Don Levine, who went to Marvin McIntyre, aide to the late President Roosevelt, who referred him to Berle, Chambers said.

Berle has confirmed the fact that he talked with Chambers and has said he would be available for questioning.

It is known that Berle took the story seriously and acted upon it with the utmost promptitude.

May Not Enjoy "Long Rest"

Mundt told reporters yesterday that every effort within the bounds of international law would be made to serve a subpena on the Russian school teacher now housed in the Soviet consulate.

He said that if he were Mrs. Kosenkina he would not look forward to the "long rest" being prepared for her in Russia.

"If I were she," she stated, "I would be concerned that the long rest they are going to give her might not be enjoyable."

In answer to a reporter's question he added,

"I don't think they would kill her and dispose of her body on American soil."

He said he had consulted with Charles (Chip) Bohlen, State Department counselor and adviser at Big Three parleys. Bohlen was quoted as saying there was "a twilight zone" in international law regarding the immunity of consular offices.

Expects Police to Get Truth

But Bohlen cautioned, Mundt said, that this was just "a horseback opinion" and would have to be checked at the Department today.

It was suggested that a subpena could be served the moment Mrs. Kosenkina stepped out of the consulate. Mundt declined to state whether or not the consulate was under any sort of surveillance.

"It's a rather amazing thing," Mundt declared, "that a foreign police force can go into a private home, whisk people away and put them in a consular office. If the White Russians did kidnap her, then there's a case that ought to be investigated. I feel confident the police authorities of the Government will pursue the leads until the truth is known."

'Resting' at Soviet Consulate

SAYS SHE WAS DRUGGED—Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, whom Soviet officials said had been drugged and carried away to a White Russian retreat at Valley Cottage, N. Y., shows reporters the part of her arm into which she said a hypodermic had been injected. The Russian officials said Mrs. Kosenkina, 52-year-old chemistry teacher at a school maintained by the Russian government for children of its U. N. delegates, had been taken to the farm to keep her from returning to the Soviet Union. Yesterday she was reported "resting" at the Soviet consulate in New York

ings when, he said, William W. Remington "was transferred to three different top confidential positions" where "highly guarded strategic information of particular interest to the Russians was fully disclosed to him."

Remington, 30, a Commere Department official on leave pending a loyalty investigation, has been accused by Elizabeth T. Bentley, self-styled former Communist, of giving her wartime secrets which she passed to Soviet agents. Remington has denied it and said he didn't know she was a Communist anyway.

Ferguson's speech Saturday night ended with Democratic Senators angrily demanding to reply, but adjournment cut off the flow of words.

Hoey, in his radio interview, declared that Ferguson's speech was "right good justification" for Mr. Truman's description of the Communist hearings as "a red herring" to divert public attention.

"President Truman is entitled to commendations instead of condemnations" for his own effort to rid the Government of Communists and their sympathizers, Hoey said.

He declared the President had proposed the loyalty check to Congress, and added that he had rid the Government of many Communists.

The North Carolina Democrat said it was "unfortunate that Senator Ferguson went to the extreme" of talking about impeachment.

Communistic Purge Depletes Gymnastic Society's Rolls

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The Communist-run purge of the Sokol youth organization may eliminate half of the gymnastic society's two million members, some of the members predicted today.

The purge, which got under way last week in two provincial towns, will continue until about September 30. By that time, the Communist-run central action committees expect to have removed from the former gymnastic organization:

1. "Originators and leaders" of the July 6 demonstrations in Prague during which thousands of Sokol members cheered for former President Eduard Benes and the late Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk, and waved American and British flags.

2. All persons whom the action committees already have "excluded from public life" or fired from their jobs. Members in this group will be expelled whether or not they took part in the demonstrations.

3. All who have "broken Sokol discipline or their national duty."

The Sokol Gazette revealed that the Sokol will undergo a sweeping ground-to-roof reorganization. Representatives of trade unions and other workers organizations are to be voted into executive positions "immediately," it said.

2d Red Teacher Goes to FBI

initely on the lead we got this afternoon."

(Asked whether he was satisfied with the progress being made in the investigation by the FBI, he said: "You bet! They're moving ahead awfully fast!")

The FBI, however, declined comment in its role in untangling the conflicting stories told by Lomakin and by Countess Alexandra Tolstoy, director of the Reed farm, who charges that Mrs. Kosenkina was taken from the farm by the Soviets against her will.

The whereabouts of Samarin's wife and three children, reported with him earlier, was not known.

The Soviet consulate told all callers that Mrs. Kosenkina was out of town and could not receive visitors.

"Not today," a spokesman said. "Today is a vacation. Tomorrow maybe." They added she "likes it here," and that she "won't be leaving for Russia for a few weeks."

The Countess Tolstoy, 62, daughter of the late Leo Tolstoy, Russian author reiterated that Mrs. Kosenkina had come to her for help in hiding from the Soviet officials, and had only gone with them because she was convinced that the Soviets "would get her anyway."

Mrs. Kosenkina told her, Countess Tolstoy said, that the Soviets had killed her father and her brothers, for reasons unspecified, and planned to kill her, too, after they learned that she had discovered the murders.

The countess told reporters that Samarin had been whisked into hiding by a kind of "underground railway" organization of White Russians. She apparently had not learned of the FBI action in Samarins' case. While this railway was not a permanent organization, she said, it nevertheless existed in a nebulous form in order to help Russians who wished to escape from Soviet vigilance.

"They go from one person to the next," she said, "and no one in the chain knows where the next person has sent them."

The countess, then advanced another theory: that Mrs. Kosenkina's alleged terror of the Soviet officials might have been pretense, and that she might in reality have been sent by the Soviets to try to trace the White Russian chain of refuge.

"Or perhaps they are looking for some mysterious person who has disappeared," the countess said. "Who knows?"

Lomakin told a press conference yesterday that he intended "to take steps" to see that Samarin and his family were "rescued" and returned to Russia.

Max Weinbaum, editor of a Russian language daily, said Mrs. Kosenkina "certainly did not want to go back to Russia."

He said she came to him because she was "fearful of her life" and that he helped her get in touch with the Tolstoy foundation.

"It would be an outrage if the Russians were permitted to send her back on the next boat," he declared. "This story of kidnaping is so ridiculous, so funny, it had to be made up."

Weinbaum said he did not know Samarin, and that the math teacher had "never come to me for help."

Another version of the yesterday's incident came from Vladimir Zenzinov who described himself in an interview as a 67-year-old exiled Russian journalist and author of books about Russia.

Zenzinov denied "all the references to forcible abduction, the hypodermic and the detention."

He told this story:

On July 29 Weinbaum called Zenzinov and said a "Soviet woman" had asked Weinbaum for help.

Weinbaum said she had been ordered back to Russia with 132 children of Russian U. N. delegates whom she had been teaching. She was "hysterical with fear," Weinbaum told him, and wanted to stay in the United States.

Zenzinov arranged for the teacher to come to his home, then telephoned Countess Tolstoy, who told him she would help the woman.

The teacher told Zenzinov that her husband, a mathematics teacher in Slaviansk, a small town in the Ukraine, had been suddenly taken away by the OGPU in 1937 and she had never seen him since.

Later, she said, she was advised to marry someone else. She had a 19-year-old son who fought in the defense of Leningrad, and she was later told he was "missing." However, she discovered he was a displaced person in Europe.

At the farm, he said, the countess introduced the teacher to others there under a false name. "Many of the people have to live this way," Zenzinov said.

He said he left the farm soon and had heard nothing more of Mrs. Kosenkina until Friday, when she telephoned asking if she could meet him, and made an appointment for Sunday.

During the interview, Zenzinov talked by telephone with someone he said was at the New York office of the FBI.

He told reporters that the FBI knew the whole story, had two men at Reed farm and had assured him it was all right to tell his story.

Malayan Reds Slay Planter, Fire Buildings

Singapore, Aug. 8 (AP).—Fifty Communist insurgents last night burst into a motion picture theater only 10 miles from Singapore Island, shot and killed a British rubber planter, wounded six persons and burned down every building on the rubber estate where the theater was located.

The raid, one of the boldest of the Malayan revolt, took place on the Telok Sangat estate in the State of Johore.

The body of the planter, H. M. Rice, was recovered today. Rice's wife and 14-year-old daughter escaped from the theater and hid until the attackers withdrew. Both were hospitalized for shock.

Cooper, Chapman Win in Ky. Primary

Louisville, Ky., Aug 8 (AP).—Kentucky's senatorial primary was settled today, the party nominations going to Senator John Sherman Cooper, Somerset Republican, and Representative Virgil Chapman, Paris Democrat.

Senator Cooper holds the Senate seat which will be at stake in the November election. The winner will serve a full six-year term.

With less than 10 per cent of the State's 4065 precincts unreported, Chapman held a lead of almost 13,000 votes over his nearest rival, labor-backed John Young Brown of Lexington. A third candidate, Milton Whitworth of Elizabethtown, polled only 10,636 votes to 96,601 for Chapman and 83,603 for Brown in 3710 precincts.

Cooper won in a walk, polling a 10-1 edge over his lone rival, Silas A. Sullivan, Jamestown attorney and perennial candidate. Cooper got 60,783 votes to 6143 for Sullivan in 3595 precincts.

Seven of the nine incumbent representatives won renomination. They were Democrats Noble Gregory of Mayfield, First District; John A. Whitaker of Russellville, Second; Frank Chelf of Lebanon, Fourth; Brent Spence of Fort Thomas, Fifth; Joe B. Bates of Greenup, Eighth, and Republicans Thurston B. Morton of Louisville, Third, and W. Howes Meade of Paintsville, Seventh. Whitaker, Chelf and Morton were unopposed.

Truman to Sign Bills, Hit GOP

$65,000,000 building loan for the United Nations headquarters in New York. This measure had been stymied in the House at the close of the regular session.

Some progress was made in getting action on the international wheat agreement, for which the President had asked approval. This advanced one step during the session by getting Senate Foreign Relations Committee assent, but the committee left it for the next Congress for final action.

Most Proposals Failed

Completely rejected or ignored were the anti-poll tax and other civil rights measures proposed by the President, the bulk of his anti-inflation program, Federal aid to education, minimum wage legislation, social security extension and benefit increase, liberalization of the Displaced Persons Act, appropriations for public Power projects whose funds were cut off in the last session, and revision of Federal pay legislation.

With this record behind them, almost all members of Congress had left the Capital yesterday, the principal exceptions being the working members of the House Committee on Un-American Acitvities, who will continue their public hearings Monday. Almost everyone else was home or on the way home to campaign.

As Southern members departed they left behind one final word. It was that if the Republicans try to carry out their promise to amend the Senate rules in January to strip the "Dixiecrats" of their filibuster power, the Senate will have on its hands the greatest filibuster ever in the debate on the proposed amendment.

He resigned his colonel's commission in 1946 and was appointed to his present job in 1947 by President Truman.

Sen. Ives Predicts Dewey's Program Will Spark Campaign

By The Associated Press

Governor Thomas E. Dewey's .500 batting average with the extra session brought a prediction by Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) yesterday that the GOP presidential nominee's own program—and not Congress' record—will dominate the party's campaign.

Dewey won one and lost one request to the GOP lawmakers in the extra session which ended Saturday night.

Congress passed a bill he publicly indorsed authorizing a 65 million dollar loan to build a permanent home for the United Nations in New York City. (President Truman asked for that legislation, too.)

Despite Dewey's personal, telephone plea, a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee bottled up a bill to broaden the base for admission of 205,000 displaced persons to this country.

Ives told a reporter the fact that Dewey couldn't get to first base with that appeal shows that the New York Governor can't be blamed for—or credited with—what the GOP-dominated Congress did or didn't do. The New York Senator is a close friend of the Republican nominee.

Democrats have made it plain they intend to pitch their campaign on a declaration that the Republican-controlled Congress is to blame for the high cost of living. Ives discounted that attack, so far as it concerns Dewey.

"I don't think the special session will affect the presidential campaign much," Ives said. "Governor Dewey will unfold his own program as his campaign goes on. Before it is over, it is my judgment most of the candidates for Congress will be running on the position he takes on major issues and not on Congress' record."

Ives said he thinks President Truman, as active head of the Government, must share with Congress any blame for high prices.

CIO-PAC Head Hits Dewey, GOP Congress

Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 8 (U.P.)—Jack Kroll, national director of the CIO Political Action Committee, today attacked the Republican Congress and Republican presidential candidate, Thomas E. Dewey and left little doubt that CIO would support reelection of President Truman in November.

Kroll opened the PAC's fall election campaign at an Ohio State rally attended by about 1500 persons. He said a formal decision on whom the CIO would support probably would be reached at a meeting of CIO vice presidents in Washington August 19 and a PAC meeting a few days later.

He also said the labor group hoped to turn out sixty million votes this November.

The PAC director rejected both Republican Presidential Candidate Thomas E. Dewey and Third Party candidate Henry Wallace as possible labor choices.

"Labor is not interested in smug little men with little minds who sit behind little black mustaches waiting to see which way the wind is blowing," Kroll said.

"And while we're talking about stooges let me say that neither are we interested in stooges for Moscow."

Kroll called the platform adopted by the Democratic Party "an outstanding document." He charged the Republican platform fails to express the real party goals should Republicans win in November.

Wallace Hits Spy Probes

New York, Aug. 8 (U.P.)—Henry A. Wallace today blasted the spy investigations of the House Un-American Activities Committee and said that President Truman was "right" in calling the hearings "a red herring."

The third party leader said the hearings were "designed to distract the people from their real problems, which the Congress has failed to solve," and were of a pattern which was "the same as that which developed in Germany in the 1930s."

Wallace said both "old parties" have substituted "conviction by headlines for judicial procedure" and were intent upon usurping the public's civil rights.

"Guilt by association, character assassination and all the tricks of smear will not succeed," Wallace said. He said the Progressive Party will "stand as a bulwark against attempts to do our country what militarists and cartelists did to Germany."

ALP to Nominate Wallace, Taylor

Taylor Castigates Idaho School Board

Lewiston, Idaho, Aug. 8 (U.P.)—Third party Vice Presidential Candidate Glen H. Taylor tonight castigated the Lewiston, Idaho, School Board for cancelling his scheduled Tuesday night address.

School board members wired Progressive Party leaders they had severed their writen contract for use of the school auditorium as a public rostrum for the third party.

Taylor wired: "One expects educational boards to promote and extend knowledge instead of stifling free speech and discussion."

Lisner Auditorium

The George Washington University has available to it a unique means of serving the National Capital in which it is situated. It possesses in the Lisner Auditorium, a gift of the late Abraham Lisner, dedicated by the university as a community center of cultural and intellectual enlightenment, the local structure best suited at the present time to the presentation of dramatic productions. The National Theater is no longer available for this purpose because its lessee is unwilling to grant admission to Negroes, while the professional players and playwrights of the theater are unwilling any longer to be parties to this sort of racial discrimination. The Belasco Theater, even if the Public Buildings Administration belatedly cooperates with those desiring to lease it, cannot be renovated in time for the fall theatrical season. The Lisner Auditorium, designed to serve as a theater, could fill the void ideally.

It would undoubtedly entail real sacrifice on the part of the university to relinquish the Lisner Auditorium, even on a part-time basis, for such community use. The auditorium is needed for a variety of student activities—meetings, dances, collegiate theatricals, etc. Nevertheless, the sacrifice is one which deserves consideration by President Cloyd H. Marvin and his board of trustees. By making it, they could not only make an inestimable contribution to the cultural life of the community but also assume signal leadership in dealing with one of the community's fundamental problems in human relations.

This newspaper expressed shock and disappointment when, in October, 1946, the George Washington University excluded Negroes from the Lisner Auditorium in conformity with the outmoded pattern established by the National Theater, instead of adopting a new pattern in conformity with its own ideals. Leadership by the university at that time might well have prevented the unhappy impasse in which Washington now finds itself. Later, when the board of trustees rescinded its ban on admission of Negroes, we applauded its decision as "an action of statesmanship" but expressed regret that the board saw fit to close the auditorium to commercial stage shows. It has a splendid opportunity now to make its declaration of principle effective in a practical way.

There is at hand as an instrument for operation of the Lisner Auditorium the American National Theater and Academy, a nonprofit theater organization chartered by Congress and devoted to the stimulation of public interest in the drama as an art. Through collaboration with ANTA and by a temporary, part-time relinquishment of its auditorium for the community's benefit, the George Washington University can take the lead in giving to the National Capital a genuine national theater. Nothing could better fulfill the true function of an institution of learning.

Europe's Food

Perhaps the chief significance of the special report of the U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization on European food programs is to show that even if tentative agricultural expansion plans of individual countries are realized by 1951, diets in many areas will remain deficient, particularly in meat, fats and oils. Moreover, the report indicates a heavier dependence in western Europe on imports of the all-important bread grains. In other words, although the net food imports from the Western Hemisphere may be expected to decline by 1951, the predominantly industrial areas of Europe will be relying more on permanent imports than they did before the war. While this will have a beneficial effect of assuring markets for Western Hemisphere wheat, it also emphasizes the precariousness of the European food picture. The vulnerability is further emphasized by the attitude of Russia. Although large Russian grain exports are now in prospect, the report notes that "by a change of policy the U. S. S. R. could absorb all of its own domestic production, plus any net surpluses available from adjacent southeastern European countries."

Meat and milk are expected to remain two of the most critical items in much of Europe. Although a considerable increase is looked for between now and 1951, estimated milk production in 1951 will be only 94 per cent of prewar and meat 88 per cent. The expected 1951 production of fats and oils will be only 97 per cent of prewar, although even this will be a distinct improvement over the present 68 per cent. Strenuous efforts are being made to develop new sources of oils, including, notably, the mammoth British peanut program in east Africa. However, the inadequacy of these figures may be seen from the fact that European population has increased considerably since prewar. In other words, a prewar level of production, even when attained again, will still be insufficient to provide an adequate diet.

Even given the most efficient land utilization and production methods which the FAO report admits are lacking in some areas, the 1951 goals represent an extremely ambitious program which could easily be thrown out of kilter. Revival of production is dependent on imports of fertilizers and machinery, which in turn depend both on international financing and a general expansion of trade. If there is any moral in the FAO report, it is to point up the interdependence of European agriculture. The support of large industrial populations is of necessity an international rather than a compartmentalized affair. In agriculture as in few other fields may be seen the compelling reasons for the revival of intra-European trade which is the hub of the Marshall Plan. In the same line, there are few more meaningful contributions European nations could make toward their economic salvation than to eliminate the overlapping in their individual food programs and concentrate on specialization and exchange.

Debits And Credits

The 11-day special session of Congress had a better record of accomplishment than could have been expected in the fevered condition in which it met. There would have been some justification to open and adjourn in view of the origin and object of the Truman call. Conceived in politics, the session was announced at the Democratic convention, with the idea of putting the Republicans on the spot. Mr. Truman simply transferred the hustings to Capitol Hill. He wanted election material more than legislation, and used the presidential whip for the purpose. In consequence, GOP hotheads came to Washington full of angry resentment, ready to quit immediately after the roll call, or, alternatively, to sick the Southern Democrats onto the Administration. Eventually, however, wiser counsels prevailed, and it was decided to make some sort of a record as a deliberative body. This was established in the 65-million-dollar loan for the United Nations building, in the anti-inflation measure, and in the housing bill.

These items constituted only a tithe of the requests that Mr. Truman put into his message to Congress. He threw in everything, as the saying goes, except the kitchen sink. Congress would have had to sit for months in order to give the list anything like proper consideration. The Truman message was calculated to appeal to all minority groups, and now Mr. Truman can say "Look what I asked for, look what they didn't do." Any such campaign would, of course, be demagogic, but it is not unlikely to have some effect in seducing those whose immediate problems leave them little room for regard for the public interest.

The President asked that primary attention be given to inflation and housing. The former in its present manifestation is a money problem, requiring the application of brakes on the availability of money, as well as the mopping up of the excess of it. Congress chose to regard the problem in this context, and gave the Federal Reserve Board more or less token controls in addition to those it already had, as well as real authority specifically to stop credit from going into installment buying. We hoped for something better. But something is better than nothing, and, in point of fact, natural forces are working on the goods side of the inflation scales in behalf of economic balance and stability. For this reason Congress was well advised to reject President Truman's request for standby authority to establish price controls and rationing. It is a fact that the vastly improved situation on the farms is tending to reduce the prices that are responsible for the pinch in the housewife's budget, viz, food prices. However, this largess will not be demonstrated soon enough in prices to aid the Republicans, and the likelihood is that the price level will be higher in November than it is today. To that extent Mr. Truman will benefit in the eyes of the electorate.

Mr. Truman may also earn some kudos from Congress' refusal to go the whole hog and enact the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Before the electorate Mr. Truman now stands as the champion of public housing and slum clearance. To both the Republicans have turned a cold shoulder. Why? The answer is that in the case of some of the more thoughtful Republicans, including the coauthor of the bill, Senator Taft, circumstances have altered cases. Construction is at the peak of performance. More credit for housing, without concurrent diversion of materials from or other controls over nonresidential building (which we should have liked to see) would, therefore, boost prices without putting up houses. In other words, it would spur the very inflation with which Mr. Truman in other parts of his message invited Congress to grapple.

Where Mr. Truman failed conspicuously to score was in publicity—the breath of life to a political campaign. In the competition for the headlines the GOP won. This was due to the simultaneous appearance of the spy hunt, intended as much to cover the New Deal with ignominy as to lay Communists by the heels. Whether the people, enervated by the breath of inflation, are as much concerned about high prices as about communism is a moot question. But one thing is certain: they don't think the hearings are to be dismissed as a "red herring." In so describing the congressional probes the President did himself no electoral service. And, correspondingly, the Republicans are making political capital out of the disclosures, as well as titillating many voters who will not see all the implications of what is in effect an invasion of the judiciary's functions. Neither side, in sum, can claim victory in the game that has just been played on Capitol Hill.

Rosika Schwimmer

Rosika Schwimmer, who died in New York on Tuesday at the age of 70, never became a citizen of the United States because, when she applied for naturalization two decades ago, she refused to promise that in case of need she would take up arms in defense of this country. A woman of tremendous vitality, a feminist leader, an uncompromising pacifist, she acknowledged that she was without any nationalistic feeling and felt only a "cosmic consciousness of belonging to the human family, shared by all those who believe that all human beings are the children of God." For a time she served as the Hungarian minister to Switzerland, one of the first women ever to hold a diplomatic post. Perhaps her greatest notoriety came from the dominant part she played in persuading Henry Ford to undertake his luckless "peace ship" venture in 1916. Her place in history, however, must rest mainly upon the adherence to pacifist principle which prompted Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes to deliver his last, and perhaps his greatest, dissenting opinion in a free speech case.

The Supreme Court of the United States decided by a vote of six to three in 1929 that she was not entitled to citizenship. There is, of course, nothing in the Constitution and there is no act of Congress requiring a pledge to bear arms as a condition of citizenship. But the Bureau of Naturalization made a practice at that time of asking applicants if they would be willing to do so as a test of their adherence to the Constitution. In 1946, the Supreme Court ruled that conscientious scruples against military service do not constitute a barrier to citizenship. How largely the Supreme Court in 1929 was influenced by the unpopularity of Mme. Schwimmer's opinions, as distinct from her somewhat academic refusal to fight in the Nation's defense, it is impossible to say. Mr. Justice Holmes evidently believed his colleagues were unduly influenced. Supported by Justices Brandeis and Sanford, he declared in his dissent:

> The applicant seems to be a woman of superior character and intelligence, obviously more than ordinarily desirable as a citizen of the United States . . . So far as the adequacy of her oath is concerned, I hardly can see how that is affected by the statement, inasmuch as she is a woman over fifty years of age, and would not be allowed to bear arms if she wanted to . . . Surely it cannot show lack of attachment to the principles of the Constitution that she thinks it can be improved. I suppose that most intelligent people think that it might be . . . Some of her answers might excite popular prejudice, but if there is any principle of the Constitution that more imperatively calls for attachment than any other it is the principle of free thought—not free thought for those who agree with us but freedom for the thought that we hate. I think that we should adhere to that principle with regard to admission into, as well as to life within, this country. And recurring to the opinion that bars this applicant's way, I would suggest that the Quakers have done their share to make the country what it is, that many citizens agree with the applicant's belief and that I had not supposed hitherto that we regretted our inability to expel them because they believe more than some of us do in the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount.

If the lesson taught by Mr. Justice Holmes has at last been learned—and an understanding of it was never more needed than today—Rosika Schwimmer's life was richly fulfilled.

24-Hour Court

The recommendation of the District Bar Association Civil Rights Committee that court processes be available on a 24-hour-a-day basis is designed specifically to cope with the police practice of arresting persons for "investigation." Surveys have shown that it is common for police to hold suspects for 24 hours or longer without bail or recourse to the courts and with no formal charges against the suspects, while evidence is being gathered for further action. The practice is of course not confined to Washington. But whatever may be said of the help it gives police, the custom runs smack up against provisions of the District Code. The code stipulates that arrests without a warrant for suspected felonies may be made only on "probable cause" and that similar arrests for misdemeanors may be made only when the act has been committed within view of the arresting officer.

The committee was faced with the dual problem of not posing a hindrance to police and at the same time protecting the civil rights of persons arbitrarily deprived of them. The result is a compromise which in our opinion would go a long way toward resolving the conflict. In addition to the recommendation that court facilities be made available at all times, the Bar Association group suggests that a new procedure be authorized by law whereby a judge could approve the detention of a prisoner suspected of a felony without charge for up to 24 hours pending the collection of additional evidence. This would give the magistrate three choices: Release of the prisoner, issuance of a warrant, or delay for a reasonable period when there was cause to believe that evidence might be obtained.

The virtue of this procedure is that while it would still permit police to hold suspects when that was necessary, the decision would be placed where it belongs, in the courts, rather than with police alone. Objections to this suggestion on the ground that it would interfere with the right of the accused to a speedy hearing seem to us to be grounded in unrealistic technicalities. The fact is that the law is being broken in every instance of an "investigation" arrest. If such arrests are in fact necessary for efficient police protection, then at least they ought to have the sanction of the law.

Foolish Economy

If all Government agencies except the Postoffice, Veterans' Administration and National Defense were abolished outright and all civilians dismissed, the total saving would be but three billion dollars out of a total 1948 budget of 40 billion dollars (7½ per cent).

Dismiss every civilian employe of the Government and close down the Postoffice, Veterans' Administration and all civilian activities of the National Defense and the total saving would be six billion dollars or 15 per cent of the national budget.

These facts should be repeated over and over again until they sink deep into the consciousness of a public which is about to be flim-flammed by the time-old shibboleth that "reduction in Federal spending is the only answer to inflation."

When 85 per cent of Federal spending is for interest on the national debt, veterans, national defense (military) and European aid, let it be made crystal clear that a few penny-wise-pound-foolish economies in a few civilian agencies is not going to affect inflation one jot or tittle. Who Was Shakespeare?

I read with much interest the ponderous disquisition in your July 31 issue by the author of the Purple Cow. As I understand his argument, there are authentic statements that Edward de Vere actually wrote poetry; therefore he wrote the plays of Shakespeare. To paraphrase Alice in Wonderland "if he could be the author of the plays he would be, but if he isn't he ain't, that's logic."

To me Mr. Burgess greatly weakens the effect of his tirade by his desperate search for rare, obsolete and purely academic words. If he had paid less attention to showing off, and had borrowed the vocabulary of Pegler or Ickes to use in place of his learned billingsgate, I should have been surer of what he meant to say.

While searching the universe for sesquipedalian words he might well have taken the pains to read what Falstaff said about blackberries to at least quote him correctly, or is there already a "Shakespeare (Oxford) Fellowship version" of the plays? Incidentally, it's amusing to witness this quixotic fencing with windmills among the Baconians and Oxfordians. E. V. WILCOX.

So far none of your correspondents in the raging Shakespeare controversy has cited one of the oldest and most stable of theories concerning the authorship of the priceless plays. It is of long standing, and is not original with me, but I think it should be added to those which have been suggested in your pages so far.

It is that Shakespeare's plays were not written by William Shakespeare — but by another fellow with the same name.

This I believe to be the most truthful theory of them all.

Mississippi Electors

On August 4 newspapers reported that the Democratic convention of the State of Mississippi pledged the Democratic candidates for the office of presidential elector, if elected, to cast their electoral ballots for Truman for President.

In filing an application for a place on the ballot as Democratic candidates for the office of presidential elector, each of these candidates warranted under oath that he would if elected cast his electoral ballot for the duly nominated candidate of the Democratic Party. That candidate is Harry S. Truman.

A presidential elector who warrants in his application for a place on the ballot that he is a Democrat and who then violates his warranty by casting his electoral vote for a person not the nominee of the Democratic Party is guilty of perjury under the Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

District Finances

The present financial trouble of the District of Columbia is a pointed example of why local self-government is an urgent necessity. It is highly improbable that this deadlock would have developed under a local government as proposed in the District charter bill now before Congress. Under the provisions of this bill Congress must act on tax legislation proposed by the city council; such legislation would be approved or disapproved, but not subject to filibuster.

Now, with the special session of Congress drawing to a close, it appears that lack of time is again to be offered as an excuse for taking no action on legislation to care for the District's financial needs. Since these needs were earlier presented to the Congress in regular session it is hard to escape the idea that the people of the District are to suffer further injustice because of present political rivalry.

Upped Prices

In the minor way that I am associated with industry's home building section, it is obvious to me that the President's call for Congress has backfired.

His roll-back of the prices plea simply prompted the manufacturers to "up" their prices in anticipation of a Federal slash. The action is comparable to a cut-rate merchant putting a $5 mark on a placard and drawing a line through it (not debting it) and underscoring $2.98 just so we, the people, can tell our friends exactly how much of a bargain we are getting.

This system is way out of proportion. The President has cried "wolf" at least six times and the manufacturers have jumped their prices. However, this "lax Congress" has failed to make any marks that can be underscored. JACK E. SALE.

Excessive Profits

After reading the editorial page of The Washington Post every day for the past two years, I have come to the logical conclusion that The Washington Post serves no other purpose than its own selfish interests and that of monopolistic big business.

The cartoon of July 31 upholds my contention. Nowhere in the cartoon, which depicts the causes for the cost of everything, is mentioned the real and primary cause for the cost of everything. I mean excessive profits! Evidently The Washington Post upholds the idea of excessive profits for business.

Question Of Method

Following is a copy of a wire sent by me to the House Un-American Activities Committee: "Based on wide experience during war in charge of group in Justice Department working against Communists who attacked me here and in Moscow for our work, and believing a decently conducted exposure of communism highly desirable, I regret that your committee is nevertheless proving itself as great an enemy of democracy by its methods as the evil it tries to expose.

"With thousands throughout the country, I am shocked at the perversion of your power and function to character assassination in staging irresponsible attacks on outstanding American citizens such as Alger and Donald Hiss and at your fomenting hatred and distrust and the very conditions on which communism thrives by the public release three months before an election of stale and discarded testimony.

World Government

A story in your July 30 issue headlined "World Government On 'Lines of Marshall Plan Is Urged'" reports that Col. Robert McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune suggests that American financial and military direction of other nations "may be the coming world government."

Even Colonel McCormick has thus joined the ranks of those who believe that some form of world government is necessary. Unfortunately, the colonel proposes that it should be a government of the world by the United States—an American empire of the sort advocated by James Burnham. Conversely, there are others who anticipate a government of the world by the Soviet Union.

Both of these forms of "world government" are imperialistic and are rejected by those of us who have been tutored in democratic ideals.

Contrary to the concept of world domination by either of the two giant powers, it is possible to see in the United Nations a beginning for the establishment of a quite different kind of world government. Some "gradualists" are confident that a world republic will gradually evolve from the U. N., as the nations gain greater experience in international cooperation. Others, more apprehensive, feel that the assumption of governmental powers by the U. N.—the power to make and enforce laws necessary to protect the security of the world—must come quickly.

The stiff competition between these three ideas of world government surely requires men of good will to hasten the "evolutionary" process. Failure to promote rapidly the transformation of the U. N. into a republic of the world, able to cope with the conditions of international anarchy which now prevail, may lead us to one-power rule of the world through the default of well-intentioned "gradualists."

Colonel McCormick's proposal and Soviet actions raise considerable question as to the time available for "evolution" to take place. Our actual physical security, as well as our economic well-being, demands some kind of reorganization of the world. Shall it be done by force, or by consent to be governed under the rule of law?

Charter Of Confusion

FROM VERSAILLES TO POTSDAM, by Leonard von Muralt; translated from the German by Heinrich Hauser. (The Henry Regnery Co., $2.)

The prime characteristic of our age seems to be a kind universal disjunction, as though reality had been transformed into a vast printer's hell-box, where words or letters that only yesterday seemed full of meaning now make no sense whatever. The notion that this general process of disintegration is to blame for everything that is wrong with the contemporary world appears to have a special fascination for Swiss writers. There is Max Picard, who held that Naziism was merely the translation into the political order of the triumph of irrelevance which is reflected in radio programs, newspapers and picture magazines. There is Professor Giedion who traces the disorder to the dissociations which have resulted from the mechanistic concept of the universe and the front division and subdivision of labor. And now we have Professor von Muralt of the University of Zurich, who applies the formula to history and perceives in the tragic fallacies of Versailles another example of the disruptive genius of modern society.

The Treaty of Versailles, he holds, merely completed the disintegration of Europe. It had been proceeding steadily since the eighteenth century enlightenment which had had the effect of setting state against church, nation against nation, class against class and economic advantage against culture. In 1919 there no longer existed any general principles upon which European statesmen might agree and no general political will to which national self-interest might be subordinated. Thus the conferees of Versailles were without a policy, and what they agreed upon was not a peace but a continuation of war by less violent means. What they sought from the further dismemberment of Europe and from the intricate chains of alliances was at once "too much and too little." What they wanted most was recompense for damage suffered, and next security against further aggression. What they lacked was the power to guarantee what they demanded; they were, therefore, ultimately obliged to seek by negotiation what they found themselves unable to enforce. Thus the work that should have been accomplished at Versailles was finally undertaken at Locarno, but by then the seeds of a second world conflict had been sown.

Confronted, says Professor Von Muralt, with the necessity of a choice between Germany and Russia, the politicians of Versailles chose to ignore it, and thereby assured themselves of the enmity of both. In other words Germany and Russia had a common interest in resisting the Versailles system and for as long as they were able to act in concert their resistance was certain to succeed. Thus the logical policy for the Western statesmen, frightened as most of them certainly were by the threat of Bolshevist Russia, would have been to forestall at all costs the possibility of a Russo-German alliance. This, says the professor, might have been obviated by incorporating Germany into system of East-European alliances, which, however, would have required a settlement of the Danzig problem. In neglecting this they repeated the blunder of Napoleon—the blunder that was to be repeated after them by Adolf Hitler; for the Russian opportunity in Europe, observes Herr von Muralt, has always arisen out of the conflict of the Germanic and the Romanic states.

This had been well understood by Metternich and Castlereagh at the Congress of Vienna, for they were Europeans first and nationalists afterward. But even had the vision of the treatymakers of 1919 been less clouded than it was, our professor believes that it would have availed nothing in view of popular passions and the pressures of particular interests. Thus they were forced into a mesh of contradictions; they asserted their right as victors to sit in judgment on the defeated, but, having limited their sphere of occupation to the Rhineland, they were also forced to treat with Germany as a sovereign and independent power. They sought to impede the industrial recovery of Germany by exaction of crushing reparations and they sought to stimulate her recovery by permitting the pumping in of credits. In short they were driven one way by national ambition, another way by economic exigencies, still another by ethnographic considerations and even yet another way by the utopian visions of Mr. Wilson. There was no clear principle under which all these conflicts of purpose could be reconciled, and it is here, of course, that Professor von Muralt perceives the symptoms of a disintegrating culture.

It was probably because the Paris peace conferences were so heavily overburdened with expert data upon so many subjects that none of the participants was able to see the problem whole. The sole function of politics is to keep "anarchy and chaos out of the common lives of peoples and nations," and when politicians are persuaded to attempt more or less than this, when they permit political power to be used for purposes extraneous to itself, the result is always failure. Thus Germany under the clear-sighted Stresemann was able to regain its freedom of diplomatic action and to resume its role of honest broker; but the freedom exercised judiciously by Stresemann became dangerous in the hands of Hitler. Versailles, says the professor, did not make inevitable the rise of Hitler, but it made it possible.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Stalin's Time Of Decision

THROUGH THE IMPENETRABLE curtain of secrecy which surrounds—as it should surround—the current conversations in Moscow, two facts emerge. It is now pretty certain that the Soviet blockade of Berlin will soon be lifted. And it is also pretty certain that a new four-power conference on the future of Germany, and perhaps of all Europe, will ensue. Indeed, Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Republican foreign policy chief, has already been alerted to accompany Secretary of State George C. Marshall to such a conference.

From these facts it is possible to draw a further conclusion. The terrible shadow of another war, which has darkened the world in the weeks since the Berlin blockade was imposed, has at least for the immediate future been lifted. Whether it will descend again depends on the results of the impending conference. And that in turn depends in the end on the decision of the always shrewd, always ruthless, sometime affable Russian dictator, Joseph Stalin.

No one can know what goes on in Stalin's mind. Yet the facts of the situation with which he is confronted are known. And these facts will certainly affect the decision which Stalin now must make.

AS HE MUSES behind the Kremlin's grim walls, the aging dictator must sometimes feel the pangs of bitter disappointment. When the war ended he had every reason to believe, and undoubtedly did believe, that Russian military preponderance on the continent, combined with the political pressure of his Communist allies, would soon give him control of most of Europe and the Middle East. Yet nothing of the sort has happened. On the contrary, Soviet power has been stopped dead in its tracks where the Red army stopped when the war ended.

It is now clear that the Communists in western Europe cannot take power either by legal or illegal means. Moreover, the West is showing real signs of recovery, thanks to American aid, and an effective military alliance between western Europe and the United States is in the making. Where the Kremlin's pressure to expand has been most direct and open, in Iran and Greece, there has been failure too; long ago in Iran, and within the last few days in Greece, where the Soviet-sponsored revolt has all but disintegrated.

But what must weigh more heavily than these disappointments on the dictator's mind is the mounting evidence of real trouble within his own sphere, in the great area held by the Red army at the end of the war.

IT IS DAILY MORE evident that Tito's defiance was only one symptom of a greater disease.

In Berlin, incredibly, the youth section of the Communists' own Socialist Unity Party has condemned the Soviet blockade of the city as a "crime against humanity." In the Soviet zone of Germany, factories are closing and the economy is near collapse, while only the presence of the Red army keeps unrest in check. In Poland, there is real evidence of the Tito disease, with the Communist Party itself showing signs of splitting into "nationalist" and Moscow wings. Before the Warsaw government at length announced its support of the Cominform and denounced Tito, there was a bitter row between Berman, Moscow's gray eminence in Warsaw, and Vice President Gomulka, a "nationalist" Communist. Berman had his way—but Gomulka is still vice president.

In Czechoslovakia, Premier Gottwald and Foreign Minister Klementis, always known as "Czech Communists," have shown signs of similarly disturbing independence. For this reason they are believed to be marked men, due for purging, although Gottwald has taken the precaution of marrying the daughter of Justice Minister Cepicka, a Moscow favorite. From Hungary, there are reports of real trouble; only the presence of the Red army there prevents open resistance to the regime.

And so it goes. Everywhere, the inbred nationalism of the people, even within the Communist parties themselves, is weakening the Kremlin's embrace. Even the Chinese Communist Party, most powerful of all Communist parties outside the Soviet Union, has developed obvious symptoms of the Tito disease.

IT IS POSSIBLE, of course, to exaggerate the meaning of all this, and to leap to the conclusion that the whole structure of Soviet power is disintegrating, which it is not. The Red army is still infinitely the most powerful military force on the continent, and the Kremlin has millions of loyal and obedient Communist servants the world over. Yet in this, his time of decision, the dictator in the Kremlin, together with his subordinates in the Politburo, must surely take into account such weaknesses in the Soviet position as those outlined above. No one can tell what Stalin's ultimate decision will be. He might decide to retreat, to consolidate his position, to give the world at the least an uneasy breathing space. Or his very weaknesses might impell him to press ruthlessly forward. Whatever his decision may be, we shall soon know, for better or for worse.

8 Firms Ask U. S. for Soviet Patent Fees

By The Associated Press

Eight American corporations have asked the United States Government to pay them approximately $14,500,000 for use by Russia of their patents under lend-lease, Government officials disclosed yesterday.

The Treasury Department has paid these companies only part of this bill because Russia in turn has delayed settling up its $11,296,000,000 lend-lease account with the United States.

These officials disclosed that the State Department, in an effort to hasten payment of the patent fees, now has suggested that the Russians deal directly with the American corporations concerned.

These American firms permitted the Russians to use their special cracking, refining and other processes in setting up four complete oil refineries which the American Government shipped to the Soviet Union under lend-lease. All four of these refineries are reported to be in operation in central Russia now.

The companies involved in the negotiations are the Houdry Process Corp. of Philadelphia; Universal Oil Products Co. of Chicago; International Catalytic Oil Processes Corp. of New York; Petrolite Corp., Ltd., of Los Angeles; Stafford Development Corp. of Kansas City; Texaco Development Corp. of New York; Max B. Miller & Co., Inc., of New York, and the Girdler Corp. of Louisville, Ky.

GAO Blamed For Freight Overcharges

By The Associated Press

A subcommittee reported to Congress yesterday what its chairman called "a startling story of waste, inefficiency and negligence" in Government auditing of wartime freight charges.

Representative Bender (R. Ohio), head of a House subcommittee investigating the General Accounting Office, estimated that railroads overcharged the Government about 700 million dollars in 1943, 1944 and 1945 "on the basis of the published tariffs and special quotations in effect during this period."

Testimony given the subcommittee, Bender added, "clearly establishes that the General Accounting Office, because of wartime difficulties and, in part, responding to pressure from the carriers transmitted through the War Department, instituted an accelerated audit system which was basically defective and grossly mismanaged."

"It is evident that because of this accelerated audit, both defective and mismanaged, the General Accounting Office failed to detect approximately 350 million dollars of these overcharges," he reported.

In addition, Bender said, the subcommittee "had intimations that the interest of the Government was not adequately protected on the original fixing of the freight rates."

Bender predicted that a re-audit of wartime freight vouchers will return to the Treasury approximately 350 million dollars, subject to tax adjustment.

The report, which was approved unanimously by the subcommittee, said overcharges on Government freight were between 10 and 12 per cent during the war.

First Billion Expended for Foreign Aid

By the United Press

Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman disclosed yesterday that ECA has spent its first billion dollars under the $5,300,000,000 foreign aid program.

He also announced that the United States has helped Denmark and Norway buy four DC-6 airliners for transatlantic service.

Hoffman's weekly summary said authorizations totaling $94,102,499 were approved last week, raising Marshall Plan cash outlay to $1,001,986,433.

The airliners, two for each country, accounted for $2,122,500 of the week's total. Officials said ECA took over the balance due on the four $900,000 planes as of April 3, the day President Truman signed the Foreign Assistance Act.

The planes will be operated by the Scandinavian Airlines System on the transatlantic run where they can earn scarce dollars to bolster their nations' hard-pressed economies.

A spokesman for the Douglas Aircraft Corp., maker of the giant four-engine transports, said no planes are now on order by Norway and Denmark. He thought the deal merely will complete payment on planes already delivered and originally financed by a New York bank.

China got $33,700,000 under the new ECA authorizations. The money, exceeding the previous Chinese total, will go for the purchase of U. S. cotton.

Austria, Denmark, France, England, Norway, Greece, Italy the Netherlands and the American-British occupation zones of Germany and Trieste also received new authorizations.

Canada figured as the largest non-U. S. supplier on the new list. Almost thirty-six million dollars worth of the week's aid purchases will be made in dominion, mostly for foodstuffs to be shipped to England.

The British-American occupation zone in Germany will get about $1,600,000 worth of coal-mining machinery, made in the United States. The Netherlands will sell about a million dollars worth of oleomargarine to Austria.

Millionaire, 60, Pilots Plans in Atlantic Hop

Canton, Ohio, Aug. 8 (AP).—Samuel F. Keener, 60-year-old millionaire industrialist, took off this morning from the Canton-Akron Airport in his private 21-passenger DC-3 airliner for a five-week business tour of Europe.

He plans stops in Spain, England, Germany, France, Sweden, Norway, Saudi Arabia and South Africa after crossing the Atlantic.

Bridges Hopes Delay in China Aid Is Ended

By The Associated Press

Attacking the Administration for "inexcusable delay" in aiding China, Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) expressed hope yesterday that Congress had "forced" a change in policy.

"It is my hope that the Chinese government at last will have the support of American arms and ammunitions to wage for itself and for all free men its battles against communism," said Bridges, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, in a prepared statement.

He said he hoped "that a new policy has begun in China, a policy that has been forced by congressional action. It is my hope that the tactics of deliberate delay which the Administration has shown in relations with the Chinese government are at an end."

Bridges complained that nearly four months elapsed before China was granted on July 23 the first of the 125-million-dollar military aid voted by Congress. He called this "inexcusable." Attached to his statement was an exchange of letters with State Department officials which spoke of later moves in Congress hindering completion of rules for granting the military aid.

Bridges said that Congress acted in voting the money "to correct the long policy of inaction in China which the Administration has espoused."

Chinese Communists were aided by Russia, he said, and the Chinese government has struggled for "its very existence." The United States may have lost much advantage "throughout laxness because we have allowed the Soviet Union to gain by default so strong a position in the East," he added.

Production Of Soft Coal Ahead of '47

By the United Press

There will be no shortage of soft coal next winter, the National Coal Association reported yesterday. It said stocks have reached a 27-month peak.

Executive Secretary John D. Battle said in the association bulletin that the first month's output under the new wage contract with John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers was well ahead of production for the comparable period in 1947. Battle praised Congress for turning down President Truman's request for price and rationing controls over coal.

"It is quite evident," he said, "that the President did not consult the Bureau of Mines or the coal industry before asking for the legislation.

"There is plenty of coal to take care of all domestic requirements, plus export demands. There is absolutely no necessity for Government interference, control, regulation or price fixing at this time."

But he said all consumers should lay in as much coal as possible during the late summer and fall months.

Finnish Firms Accused Of Reparations Frauds

Helsinki, Finland, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Vapaa Sana, official newspaper of the Communist-dominated Peoples Democratic Union, charged in an editorial today that Finnish industries have gained illegal profits in a huge war reparations fraud.

The newspaper said Finnish firms falsely invoiced goods delivered as war reparations payments to the Soviet Union. It charged the firms received advance payments from the government, but that the money had been used for other purposes than war reparations.

N. Y. Printers Approve Pact With 12 Dailies

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Composing room employes in 12 New York City daily newspapers today voted to accept a new agreement calling for a $9 weekly pay raise.

The new contract, a union spokesman said, also prohibits the use by publishers of "substitute" printing processes, such as the "varitype."

The vote ended a six-month dispute between Local 6 of the AFL International Typographical Union and the Publishers Association of New York. The vote was 609 to 414. The new agreement covers 2500 composing room employes.

Laurence H. Victory, president of the local, said the new agreement would be signed Monday.

Approval of the pact followed a turbulent 4½-hour meeting at which many of the rank and file speakers called for its rejection. The ITU executive board already had approved the agreement.

The previous agreement expired March 31, but workers agreed not to strike pending outcome of negotiations, which began last February.

The new agreement will run for 13½ months from the date of the signing.

3 Million Under Union Health Plans

By the United Press

The Labor Department reported yesterday that at least three million workers, represented by nearly 100 labor unions, now are covered by health, welfare and retirement benefit plans.

The department said the number of workers covered by health-benefit plans negotiated by employers and unions rose from 600,000 to 1,250,000 from 1945 to 1947.

In some cases the programs are industry-wide, such as those negotiated by the United Mine Workers, International Ladies Garment Workers Union (AFL) and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers (CIO). Most, however, are on a local basis.

The coal mining industry has more than 450,000 workers covered, and the clothing and textile industries have at least 850,000. More than 150,000 street and electric railway workers are protected and 140,000 steelworkers.

The department said the first such plan involved employes of the Newburgh, N. Y., Publi Service Corp. and was negotiated by the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes (AFL) on May 1, 1926.

CIO News' Bare Page 1 'Like Congress Record'

In small type in the center it explained: "This page is as bare as the record of accomplishment of the Eightieth Congress at its special session."

Bolivia Strike Ends

La Paz, Bolivia, Aug. 8 (AP).—A week-old strike of Bolivian railway workers was settled last night and normal service resumed. The railwaymen went out in sympathy with printers, who struck for higher wages. The printers are still out.

Heart Institute Begins Work As Unit of PHS

The National Heart Institute, created by Congress in June to fight cardiovascular diseases, will begin functioning today as one of the National Institutes of Health in the Public Health Service.

Van Slyke

Dr. Cassius J. Van Slyke has been named director of the institute by Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele of USPHS. Succeeding Dr. Van Dyke as chief of the Research Grants and Fellowships Division of the National Health Institutes will be Dr. David E. Price, chief of the Research Grants Branch, National Cancer Institute.

Set up by the National Heart Act, the new institute will "develop a broad attack upon cardiovascular diseases, now the leading cause of death in the United States."

Its program will include conducting of research, financial aid to outside institutions for research and training of professional personnel, fellowships for individual scientists, and grants-in-aid and technical assistance to the States for heart disease services.

Also to be established is a National Advisory Heart Council, to be composed of outstanding scientists and clinicians in the cardiovascular disease and representatives of the public.

The council will advise the Surgeon General on all phases of the program developed in the heart institute and in other PHS units. Headquarters for the heart institute will be at the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda.

Besides directing the institute, Dr. Van Slyke will also coordinate all heart disease activities in the PHS.

Born in Benson, Minn., Dr. Van Slyke, 47, gained his M.D. from the University of Minnesota in 1928, and joined the PHS in 1932. From 1936 to 1944 he did experimental research at the PHS venereal disease research laboratory, Staten Island, N. Y.

He has been in charge of the research grants-in-aid and fellowships program of the National Institute of Health since 1945.

Married and the father of two children, Dr. Van Slyke lives at 4705 Hunt ave., Chevy Chase.

Atomic Bomb Crashes Opera Via 'Barber' at Watergate

By Paul Hume

The atom bomb entered the field of opera last night during a performance of "The Barber of Seville" at the Watergate.

It happened while Don Basilio was telling Dr. Bartolo about the cumulative power of slander. As he reached a dramatic moment in his description of how a slander, once started, grows without hindrance, the worthy doctor wailed, "questa bomba atomica." In English this would mean, "What an atomic bomb!"

And so the Barber goes these days. Its recitative is hammed up in low comedy, its melodies seldom clearly outlined by singers unable or unwilling to master the art of coloratura singing. Last night we had half a dozen varieties of styles, all intended to make a unified ensemble. It did not work too well. But for the public, the results seemed laudable.

Jane Frazier in Debut

Jane Frazier made her debut as Rosina. Her voice is clear and unforced on top, but produces yipping sounds in the lower portion which are unbecoming to a young Spanish lady. The management of the role was in fine standard routine and her runs and passage work clean. She added the war-torn Variations on the Carnival of Venice for her Lesson song.

Cesare Bardelli added another good role to the list he is presenting in Washington. As Figaro, he makes a wonderful appearance, handsome vocally and in costume. His voice is ideal for the part but he needs a little more experience to batten down tricky spots which confused him momentarily last evening.

Bruno Landi, who frequently sings the Count Almaviva at the Metropolitan, failed to articulate far too much of his scale work in one of the prize lyric roles. His voice, ranging from full through half voice to falsetto, was pleasant to hear but hardly reminds one of performances by Schipa or Charles Hackett.

Tatozzi Superb

Lloyd Harris as the old doctor, was a good buffo, not much voice, but an acceptable actor. He was wise in omitting many of the overdrawn items which too often spoil Bartolo these days. Victor Tatozzi stood out for the fine vocalizing he did as Don Basilio. His voice is really superb and ought to be made one of the best basses of our time. But it takes work.

Pietro Cimara led a well-timed performance, playing his own piano recitatives. The orchestra was not up to the precision demanded by Rossini. Altogether, the Barber seems to have outlived much of its usefulness, but a smoothly integrated performance might still justify its presence.

This week: Wednesday, Butterfly; Thursday, Rigoletto; Friday, Traviata; Sunday, Cayalleria and Pagliacci.

Hoover Group Meeting Here Plans Drastic Federal Shifts

By the United Press

Less than a dozen men headed by former President Hoover met secretly in an office a few blocks from the White House yesterday to plan radical changes in the United States Government.

The group which is quietly taking the Federal government apart is the Commission on Reorganization of the Executive Branch. It has been hard at work for the past year drawing up a blueprint for the first top-to-bottom streamlining in history of the hodge-podge of Federal departments, agencies and commissions which have grown up piecemeal for the past 150 years.

The Hoover commission in itself has no power to make any changes. It will make its recommendations to the new Congress as soon as it meets next January.

Exactly what those recommendations will be is one of the best-kept secrets in the Capital. But one informed source hinted today they will be "pretty drastic."

Congress apparently expected the commission to make sweeping recommendations. In the resolution passed last year to establish the commission, it ordered the members to draw up plans for:

1. Cutting Government spending to the lowest level possible without harming the quality of service.

2. Eliminating duplication of services.

3. Consolidating services, activities and functions of a similar nature.

4. Abolishing services and functions which are no longer needed.

Another problem is decentralization of the Federal Government—getting some of the agencies out of crowded Washington and into other cities from coast to coast.

The Government-streamlining project is a strictly non-political undertaking.

While the resolution setting up the Hoover commission was sponsored by two Republicans, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts, and Representative Clarence J. Brown of Ohio, the plan was warmly backed by Democrats, including President Truman.

The members of the commission were appointed jointly by Mr. Truman, Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., and Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg.

In addition to Hoover, it includes Defense Secretary James Forrestal, Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming, former Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson; Representatives Brown and Carter Manasco (D., Ala.), Senators George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) and John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) former ambassador to Britain, Joseph P. Kennedy; George H. Mead, Dayton, Ohio, industrialist; James H. Rowe, jr., an assistant to the late President Roosevelt, and Dr. James K. Pollack of the University of Michigan.

WAA Plans to Sell Singerly Village By Sealed Bids

Philadelphia, Aug. 8 (AP).—The War Assets Administration announced today Singerly Village—a housing project for women employes of a wartime industrial plant at Elkton, Md.—will be sold by sealed bid.

The project, covering more than 42 acres, is located a quarter mile from the business district of Elkton. It originally cost the Government $250,000.

Priority preference in the sale will be extended to Federal, State and local governments and to eligible tax-exempt, nonprofit institutions until midnight August 24. Bids from the general public will be received until midnight, September 13, and opened at 2 p. m. September 14.

14 Ringworm Cases Found in Local Schools

Fourteen of 788 white children enrolled at 10 local summer schools were found to have ringworm of the scalp, the Health Department reported yesterday.

The Bureau of School Medical Inspection used a special lamp in the examinations for the first time. Twelve of the cases were new ones and two were already under treatment. The children were referred to their family physicians for care.

The department warned that although most ringworm infection is found in only small areas of the scalp, it may be spread to small lacerations and abrasions and thus become imbedded in the skin.

The infection is usually found at the base of the hairline on the back of the head where the hair has been closely trimmed by clippers. Small lacerations caused by razors and clippers can easily inoculate the spores of the ringworm fingers into the scalp, the department explained.

The small proportion of girls found to be infected with the disease indicates that the infection is spread mainly by barber instruments such as razors and clippers, the department concluded.

8 Die as Storm Batters British, French Coasts

London, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The British and French coasts were swept today by one of the worst English Channel storms in recent years. A United States merchant ship was battered by high seas, yachts were overturned and seacoast resorts were flooded by pounding waves.

At least eight persons had died in the storm over the weekend. Late today the ripping winds were reported to be slowing down.

The U. S. merchant ship William Hawkins reported she was drifting helplessly with a broken steering gear off Beachy Head. The Newhaven lifeboat and the tug Foremost were sent to the ship's assistance, but the Liberty ship managed to get underway shortly before the lifeboat reached her.

Heavy seas pounded British coastal towns at high tide. The spray crashed over the coastal road at Sandgate, near Folkestone, and spouted as high as 60 feet.

The 18-foot yacht Gull ran aground at Seaford and six persons, including a woman and two children, were rescued by a lifeboat.

The storm wrecked a number of small boats and broke the seawall at Brooklands estate near Clacton on Sea. Flood tides whipped by 70-mile-an-hour gusts swamped 450 summer bungalows on the estate.

'Warmongers' On Air Draw Pulpit Fire

"Warmongering over the radio has become the great American vice," the Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney, minister emeritus of the National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N sts. nw., declared yesterday.

Dr. McCartney

Dr. McCartney, now director of the Chicago Sunday Evening Club, called upon the congregation to "repudiate the voices of the warmongers that blare their idotic nonsense in impassioned accents over the radio each night."

He asserted that an evil spirit has taken possession of columnists and broadcasters who "keep building up a military war psychosis on both sides of the ocean."

'Distortion of Facts'

"Why must they keep picking up some incident or phrase, giving it an exaggerated significance that is a distortion of the facts?" he asked.

Speaking on "The Quest for Security," Dr. McCartney declared that education is not the solution to to the problems of the day.

"Every great empire that has passed away was in the very hour of its passing the wisest, the most knowing, the most technologically advanced people upon the face of the earth," Dr. McCartney said.

We need not look for national security in the realm of power politics, he asserted, adding that we fought two wars on that assumption and are "spoiling" for a third.

"Even in this atomic age it should be possible for us to defend ourselves without becoming a garrisoned state or an imperialistic power," he said.

Deplores Dollar Worship

Business prosperity is believed to be the sure source of security and satisfaction today, Dr. McCartney said. Declaring that we have "deified" the dollar mark, he stated that "the root of our present chaos lies in the fact that men and nations have been seeking the glory of life in money and the things money can buy."

"If we allow our spirits to turn sour and angry, and become frustrated, if we keep rubbing salt into America's open sore of racial issues and continue to keep splitting our people into contentious groups that are suspicious of one another, why then the country isn't worth bothering about. We might as well invite the Russians to come and get it or give it back to the Indians," de declared.

The thing that really matters in making a nation great, he concluded, is the spirit of the people, that "mysterious thing called integrity of character."

Parking Unit Picks Officers

The newly formed Merchants' Parking Corp., which plans to operate a series of "fringe" parking lots with shuttle bus service to downtown Washington, will meet "sometime this week" to elect officers and initiate definite plans.

According to a general agreement reached at a recent organizational meeting, the officers will be: Maj. Gen. David McCoach, president; John A. Reilly, treasurer; Arthur J. Sundlun, secretary; Joseph C. McGarraghy, counsel.

The group, recently incoroporated in Dover, Del., plans to acquire 99-year leases on two lots, one in Temple Heights at the intersection of Florida and Connecticut aves. nw., and another at 26th and E sts. nw., near the Christian Heurich Brewery. Each lot would accommodate 450 cars.

The corporation may also acquire a sublease on a third "fringe" lot, already in operation on the square reserved for the new Federal Courts building, at John Marshall pl. and C st. nw., according to Reilly.

Reilly estimates that there are 12,000 to 15,000 potential customers for such "fringe" parking areas, among shoppers from outlying regions. The lots probably would open after 9:30 a. m., he said, to eliminate all-day parkers. Total cost for parking and two-way bus service will probably be 45 cents or less, he added.

3 Services Plan Fla. Maneuvers

By the United Press

Joint air-ground attack exercises will be held near Valparaiso, Fla., between September 27 and November 3, the Army, Navy and Air Force announced yesterday.

Six exercises lasting three days each will be held. Each will include actual air and ground demonstrations. About 100 Navy and 100 Marine planes will take part, backed up by 2000 sailors and Marines.

Archbishop Asserts World Needs Revival

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Archbishop of York, the Most Rev. Cyril F. Garbett, told 600 Angelican bishops today that the world needs a Christian revival to help civilization weather the crisis of the atomic age.

Crowding Westminster Abbey to hear Dr. Garbett call for the "uncompromising preaching of Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior," were most of the church leaders, who, for almost a month, have been participating in the Lambeth Conference. Attending the conference are bishops representing the Church of England and the Protestant Episcopal Church, with observers from several other denominations in various lands.

Today's service was the final worship of the conference, and the sermon was a parting word to the bishops before their return to their dioceses in all parts of the world.

The archbishop said that with the discovery and use of the atomic bomb we live more nearly in the spiritual atmosphere of the first Christians, who expected at any time the end of the world.

"Within a few years," he continued, "our civilization may pass away. Now, therefore, is the hour of crisis; before it is too late we must preach the gospel and bear our witness; now we must repent and call others to repentance before the door of opportunity is shut."

Special Lobby Inquiry Finished

By the United Press

Attorney General Tom C. Clark yesterday accepted "with deep reluctance" the resignation of Irving R. Kaufman, New York lawyer, who has conducted a special investigation of lobbying.

Kaufman accepted temporary appointment as a special assistant to the Attorney General last October, with the understanding he would serve three months. But it took him 10 months to complete the first thorough survey of lobbying ever made by the Justice Department.

Clark pointed out that Kaufman's work resulted in "a great increase of registrations" under the Lobbying Act of 1946, as well as the indictment of four persons for alleged wilful failure to register.

Kaufman also set up a permanent lobbying investigation section in the Justice Department to carry on his work. He left recommendations with Clark for tightening up the 1946 law, but these were not made public.

Bride Says 'Sun Dance' For $19,000 Radio Win

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—A Fort Worth, Texas, bride of two weeks won $19,000 in prizes tonight for correctly identifying the "mystery melody" on an ABC radio quiz show.

Mrs. Herbert Skelton, 36, named the mystery tune as "Sun Dance" when she got a telephone call from the "Stop the Music" show in New York.

The song, jointly written in 1901 by Leo Freedman and Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.) long has been a favorite background piece for American Indian shows and movies.

Almost 50 previous contestants in the past four weeks had failed to identify it correctly, an ABC spokesman said.

"Why, it's quiet as a puppy on his pillow!"

THAT'S the way one Buick owner puts it—and we think the picture is pretty pat.

Because you know what a perfect image of complete serenity a sleeping puppy makes.

Yet you know how instantly he comes to life, how quick and eager and ready for fun he is the moment you give the signal.

Now slip into one of these Buick beauties—and see how precisely the shoe fits.

Standing still—while you wait for a light, for instance—you hardly know your engine's running. All hum, drum and engine sensation seem magically wiped away.

Then you nudge the gas treadle, ever so little.

In an instant, eight eager cylinders take hold—and you swoosh away like a hare before hounds, leaving the whole pack trailing.

Now, it takes a couple of major engineering developments to make that combination possible.

First off, it takes plenty of lively, eager power. Fireball power, such as only Buick has, ready to squeeze the last bit of action from every drop of gas.

Then it takes something really new in the way of engine mountings. In this case, Hi-Poised engine mountings that literally rock vibration to sleep.

Technically, engineers tell us, it's a matter of controlling the frequency of vibrations to which all cars fall heir. It means cradling the power plant at scientifically determined points—and smothering vibration build-up in fat pillows of specially compounded rubber.

The result? Well, it adds up to cyclonic power wrapped in velvet. Life—ginger—get-up-and-go—in a package that's being called the silkiest thing on wheels.

Why not learn more about it—first hand? Your Buick dealer will do his best to oblige—and he'll take your order with or without a car to trade.

BUICK alone has all these features

Indians Repulse Yankees, 8-6, 2-1, Before 73,484

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

POVICH

THE STOCKHOLDERS of the Cleveland Club will find it easy to forgive Bill Veeck if the Indians don't win the American League pennant. Their disappointment will be cushioned by the plush feel of more moola than any club president ever delivered to his partners in a single season. Right now, Veeck's Indians are a sensation both in the league standings and the box-office.

Surely the Indians set some kind of a record last week when in four days they drew three crowds of more than 70,000 and another mob of more than 42,000. Visiting clubs staggered happily out of Cleveland under the weight of the hefty checks representing their part of the take from Veeck's flourishing Cleveland baseball business.

Even the sixth-place Nats cut in on the swag. With Veeck unveiling Satchel Paige as a starting pitcher, the Nats and Indians drew a 72,000 crowd. When Veeck signed the fortyish Paige, the charge was heard that the Cleveland club was exploiting a colored pitcher, but he won his first start and no visiting club's disgust has been so great it has declined to accept its share of the swollen gate receipts.

THE INDIANS IN VEECK'S first full year as president of the club last season set an all-time attendance record for Cleveland. Now in a year when crowds are off in other cities, the Indians have surpassed their 1948 attendance with two months of the season still to go. Cleveland, one-sixth the size of New York, is outdrawing the Yankees.

Hank Greenberg owns more of the Cleveland stock than Veeck does, but Veeck is the boss. He went into the Cleveland operation on a shoestring but he was armed otherwise with a contract as president that assured him virtual control. Nobody ever made good a stewardship any quicker in baseball. Under Veeck's aggressive promotion, the Indians almost paid for their cost in the first year of Veeck's presidency.

Veeck sold the Indians to baseball fans not only in Cleveland but in all Ohio, even moving into the territory of the Cincinnati Reds. He hired a 29-man public relations staff, but Veeck himself was the No. 1 salesman. Coatless and tieless he talked to the man on the street, in the clubs and hotels and addressed as many as three civic clubs in one day.

HE ALMOST MADE some bad mistakes, but his good luck held out. He tried to trade Lou Boudreau to the Browns, but permitted Cleveland fans to talk him out of it, happily. He asked for waivers on Bob Lemon, then got sore when the fact leaked out, and recalled them. But one thing he never underrated—baseball's high potential of interest in Ohio. He knew he was tapping gold there.

Veeck's success has put a new face on the operations of the league. All of a sudden Cleveland is in a position to bid with the rich Red Sox or Yankees or Tigers for any player it wants. Overnight, Veeck promoted Cleveland from a poor club to a team with tremendous operating funds even if it isn't backed by the great corporate wealth of Yawkey, Briggs and Topping-Webb.

When Veeck felt that the Indians could win the pennant with one more pitcher, he outbid the Yankees for Sam Zoldak of the Browns despite the fact that the Yanks needed a pitcher just as desperately. He gave $90,000 for Zoldak, too much it appeared, but Veeck reasoned logically enough he could get it all back and more in one week if the Indians stayed in the race.

LAST WINTER HE OUTBID the rich Tigers for Johnny Berardino of the Browns, paying $50,000. Actually he didn't need Berardino, a second baseman, but he was buying him against the day when the desperate Tigers would be willing to trade him a pitcher for Berardino, and that will probably happen next winter and Veeck will be getting a good pitcher cheaply.

The Indians have been in and out of the league lead twice in the past week. They were supposed to fold before this, but the current Cleveland team has shown a talent for bouncing back. And everybody knows they could take it all if Bob Feller could suddenly regain his winning touch.

Add a Cleveland world series to the tremendous attendance the Indians have been drawing all season, in a park that can seat 80,000 on any day, and you'd have the biggest money-making team in history. If Veeck gets world series profits to operate with, you're apt to see baseball's highest roller.

Nats Lose 2 to Tigers, 3 to Umps

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Detroit, Aug. 8.—The Nats did business on a wholesale scale today, losing two decisions to Detroit and three to the umpires.

To the delight of 29,811 observers, the Tigers won the doubleheader, 5 to 3 and 6 to 5. And to their further amusement, Carden Gillenwater, Jake Early and Manager Joe Kuhel were chased out of the second game.

Gillenwater got his orders from Umpire Bill Summers for arguing over a third strike in the fifth inning. Early, who was evicted only yesterday by Umpire Red Jones, became a two-time loser at the hands of Mr. Jones in the same inning that saw Gillenwater's expulsion. Jones thought he heard Early ride him from the bench.

But Scarborough Wasn't Even There

Just after he had tossed out Manager Joe Kuhel and Jake Early today, Umpire Red Jones thought he heard Ray Scarborough giving him a verbal going over from the Nats' bench.

Jones, umpiring at first base, wheeled around and shouted:

"And you're out, too, Scarborough."

Eight Members of New Club

When Skipper Kuhel rushed out to protest the banishment of Early, he was thumbed out by Jones for "delaying the game."

The addition of three more names to the Nats' "I've Been Chased" club brings the membership to eight for the 1948 campaign. Seven new members have been enrolled on the present trip, which started July 26.

Hal Newhouser became the first pitcher in the major leagues to win 15 games this year by southpawing the Tigers to their victory in the opener.

Newhouser got a mighty lift in the first inning when Pat Mullin belted his fourteenth home run, a two-run clout, against Early Wynn. Although they had many chances to recoup, the Nats never did recover from that smash and Wynn went down with his twelfth defeat.

Lefthander Billy Pierce, a Tiger rookie, received credit for the triumph in the nightcap, his first in the majors, although he wasn't around at the windup.

Houtteman to Rescue

He had to be rescued by Art Houtteman in the eighth when the Nats scored two runs and threatened to do more damage.

Pierce was staked to a four-run lead in the first inning when the Tigers got five of the eight hits they made off Forrest Thompson. Pierce accounted for the final two Detroit runs, produced in the sixth. He tripled one across and scored the sixth himself.

Earl Wooten and Mark Christman were the big guns in Washington's 11-hit offensive against Pierce. Christman knocked in two runs in the three-run Nats' fifth with one of his two singles and scored a third run in the eighth inning counterattack.

Wooten rapped out a pair of doubles, his second driving in a run in the fifth inning. Micky Vernon's fly and Gil Coan's pinch single drove in the other two Washington scores.

The Nats experienced little difficulty getting on base against Newhouser, reaching him for 11 hits, three more than Wynn allowed, and four walks. Except for the fourth inning, however, when they scored three unearned runs, the Griffs couldn't touch him when a hit meant something. They left 11 stranded.

Shortstop Lipon, whose three errors permitted two Nat runs yesterday, started and ended Washington's three-run uprising this afternoon.

With Christman on first with the first of his three hits, Lipon muffed Vernon's easy roller. Evans walked and Wynn stroked the second of his three singles to score Christman and Vernon. Sullivan's single delivered Evans. Wooten followed with a line drive of which Lipon made a leaping catch to interrupt the flareup.

Christman Caught Napping

After Mullin's two-run blast in the first inning, the Tigers upped their lead to 3-0 in the second inning when Lake squeezed Wakefield home from third with two away. Christman was caught flat-footed on the play.

Lipon doubled home the fourth Tiger rally in the third and pinch-hitter, Vic Wertz' long fly to center scored Mullin with the fifth run in the fifth inning. Wynn didn't permit a Tiger to reach first base after that.

IN SHORT, Wynn has given up three home runs in his last three games. He hasn't pitched a victory since June 25th and has gone the distance only three times since then . . . Eddie Yost and Gil Coan, both resting sprained ankles, are expected back in the lineup Tuesday in Philadelphia when the Nats play the Athletics a twilight bill . . . Although he's one of the biggest men on the Nat squad, Tom McBride is also one of the fastest. He's willing to wager he can outrun any of his teammates except Coan.

Jury Hears Olympic Relay Protest Today

In 400-Meter Disqualification

Runners Say Lines So Dim, Complicated That Judges May Have Become Confused

By Ted Smits

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—Sprinters Barney Elwell and Lorenzo Wright angrily blamed dim and complicated zone lines today for the first major dispute of the 1948 Olympic games—disqualification of the victorious American 400-meter relay team.

Head United States Track Coach Dean Cromwell has filed a formal protest which comes up for consideration before an international jury tomorrow.

Crux of the argument is whether Ewell and Wright, the first and second American sprinters, exchanged the baton inside the specified 20-meter zone. The judges said they didn't and gave the race to the British, who finished about ten yards behind.

"Each running lane had three different marks in it," said Wright. "They were very dim. In addition the starting line for a distance race ran through them all. I know we made a legal exchange of the baton, but probably the officials got mixed up by all the marks."

"I gave Wright the baton just over the center mark and well before the last marker," said Ewell, the number one man. "Those lines were so faint they could hardly be seen."

"I am trying to find a picture that will bear us out and if I do I will insist on a reconsideration of the verdict," said Avery Brundage, United States Olympic Committee president and himself a member of the jury of appeal headed by Lord Burghley, chairman of the Olympic organizing committee.

"I didn't see anything irregular myself. It all depends on the field officials, unless we have positive proof, there is nothing we can do."

Disqualification of the American team, which was standing and waiting at the victory platform when the stunning reversal was announced, repeated what was done at Stockholm in 1912 in the same race. The Americans won the 400-meter relay then but were ruled out on the same grounds.

"It is debatable as to what has happened," said Lloyd Olds of Michigan Normal, assistant tract manager. "The only way it can be decided is to see the pictures. It doesn't seem men as experienced as ours would run outside the zones. Of course, if we did we should be spanked.

"It seemed those lines hadn't been painted since the games started. They were awfully faint," said Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson, Big Nine commissioner and vice president of the American Olympic Committee.

The official moving pictures of the race were processed today at the J. Arthur Rank studios and will be shown to the International Olympic Committee tomorrow.

There were 12 officials at each exchange, two for each pair of runners. Brundage said no one knew the name of the judges who disqualified the Americans.

Here is the story of Lorenzo Wright, the broad jumper from Wayne University who was recruited for the team when Ed Conwell of Jersey City, N. J., became ill:

"I triple-checked the position of my feet while I waited for Barney. I was six inches inside the marker.

"A judge said to me, you're not going to step over that line, are you?' and I said 'Hell, no.'

"Barney and I had a slow pass. I know it was inside the markers. I was afraid of bumping into the guy in the next lane. There were all kinds of lines for different races. No official gave us any instructions.

"After the race they told us to

Macks Whip Browns, 7-5, With 4 in 7th

St. Louis, Aug. 8 (AP).—A four-run uprising in the seventh featuring a two-run double by Hank Majeski helped the Philadelphia Athletics to a 7-5 verdict over the St. Louis Browns today. Pitcher Dick Fowler, the winner, although he needed help, hit his first homer of the year.

It was Fowler's eleventh victory against three losses. Ralph Schwamb, the first of five Brownie hurlers, was the loser.

Rowing Takes Spotlight in Olympic Meet

By Bob Considine

Henley-on-Thames, England, Aug. 8 (INS).—A determined little army of American Olympic oarsmen pledged themselves today to wipe out the depressing memory of yesterday's stunning loss by Jack Kelly, jr., of Philadelphia, in the single sculls.

The Americans will go to bat in three of the seven events on the program which will wind up the rowing. America has been knocked out of four divisions.

The American colony quartered in this little town on the banks of the Thames—which tomorrow will become the sports capital of the world during the Olympic rowing championships — feel certain we will win the three races for which we remain eligible.

Confidence ran high today as final preparations were made by our boats in the featured eight-oared event and in the competition for four with coxswain and four without coxswain.

California Eight Looks Best

California's burly eight, with little Ralph Purchase handling the megaphone, simply slaughtered rival galley slaves in qualifying for the finals. In beating Italy in the semifinals, the Bears swept to a victory by almost countless lengths to qualify for the big payoff match with Britain and Norway tomorrow.

Britain's eight is pretty good. It came within two seconds of California's semifinal time of the distance, while beating Canada. Norway's chances are obscure.

Coach Alan Walz of Yale has a four-man unpiloted crew which is in excellent condition. The quartet—composed of Robert Perew, Gregory Gates, Stuart Griffing and John Kingsbury—performed well yesterday despite a wide difference in heat times.

Denmark, for instance, won its semifinal race for fours without coxswain in 7 minutes, 13.8 seconds for the course which is slightly less than 2000 meters.

Robinson Hits Three Out of Park; Paige Wins

Cleveland, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians strengthened their hold on first place in the American League today by sweeping a doubleheader over the New York Yankees, 8-6 and 2-1, before a standing-room-only crowd of 73,484 paid customers.

Today's crowd set a new major league attendance record for three consecutive days, the total being 188,081. The old record of 186,151 was set in a Cleveland-Yankee series at New York, June 11-12-13.

Steve Gromek and Ed Klieman combined to hold the Yankees to five hits in the nightcap. A 2-run homer by First Baseman Eddie Robinson in the eighth inning won the first game. Robinson hit three homers in the twinbill.

The double victory gave Cleveland a lead of six percentage points over the second place Philadelphia Athletics.

Rookie Righthander Bob Porterfield of the Yankees, was hit on his pitching had by a line drive today in his first start in the major leagues.

Later, Hospital officials said the X-rays showed no fracture.

Porterfield was hurt in the seventh inning of a Yankees-Indians nightcap by a ball hit by Pinch-hitter Hal Peck. In 6 2/3 innings, the 24-year-old former hurler for Newark of the International league gave up two runs and four hits, one a homer by Eddie Robinson.

Cleveland failed to connect safely until the fifth inning.

Satchel Paige, who went in as a relief hurler in the eighth inning, received credit for the win in the first game, his third against one loss.

Bogley Upsets Mouledous for National Junior Tennis Title

Sandlot Notes

Post League Begins Busy Week Today

THE WASHINGTON POST-Industrial League begins a busy week today, with two rained-out games taking place on the Ellipse at 5:30 p. m. Two more games are carded for tomorrow, and if rain doesn't interfere, the play-offs will begin Wednesday.

Today's contestants are Thrifty against Cameo, first half champion, on the north diamond, and Heurich, leading the second half chase, against Sunnybrook on the west field. Tomorrow, Thrifty meets Heurich on the north and Naiman tangles with Cameo on the west, both at 5:30 p. m.

Heurich has a 7-3 record, followed by Sunnybrook, , 5-4; Cameo, 5-5; Thrifty, 4-5, and Naiman's, 3-7. If Heurich takes the second half title, it will meet Cameo Wednesday in the first of a three-game series for the crown. If Cameo rallies to take the second half championship, no playoff will be necessary. The league titlist will compete in the city championship series which opens August 18 on the Ellipse.

WASHINGTON'S TOURING ball teams met with consistent success yesterday. Takoma Decorators girls won a weird softball double-header over the Ephrata, Pa., girls with Jerry Fiorello pitching all the way in both games for Takoma. The first game began at midnight yesterday and saw Takoma win, 3-0. The second game, played conventionally in the afternoon, resulted in a 4-1 win for Takoma. Jerry gave up three hits at midnight, and only one in the afternoon. . . . Behind the six-hit pitching of Benny Duvall, Coolidge High star, Cameo Furniture of The Washington Post-Industrial League defeated Charles Town, W. Va., 6-2. Benny struck out eight, and slammed out three hits.

FALLS CHURCH, which has already clinched the Junior Fairfax County League championship, defeated Groveton, 2-1, in the loop's feature game yesterday at Groveton. McLean whipped Vienna twice, 2-0, and 5-1, and Bailey's edged Annandale, 8-7, to round out the league's slate . . . Eddie Glover's double in the ninth gave the Irish War Veterans a 6-5 win over the Flying Clouds at the Army War College. The Vets have a 16-5 record . . . Behind the six-hit pitching of Tom Groht, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 127, defeated Dun Loring, Va., Fire Department, 3-2, at Madrilon Field . . . Eddie's Friendly Tavern defeated Moose Club, 6-3, at Rosedale . . . Dale Enterprise of Harrisonburg, Va., scored three runs in the seventh inning to whip Yeatman, 3-1, at Washington-Lee High in Arlington. The win gave Dale the Virginia Softball Association District 7 title. Waldo Showalter's bases loaded triple decided the game, and earned Dale representation in the State tourney next Saturday in Richmond . . . Maryland Sport Club and Silver Hill won yesetrday to take over point possession of first place in the Prince Georges County A League. Maryland Sport defeated Campus Club, 6-4, and Silver Hill blanked Fort Carroll, 4-0. In the other game, Dixie Pig defeated Sunnybrook, 8-3. In the Prince Georges B League, Croome beat Brandywine, 7-2, and Cheltenham downed Maryland Aces, 4-0.

Leaders Lose In Playoffs

The top two teams of the Montgomery County Park League found the Shaughnessy playoff system distasteful yesterday as they were eliminated by the third and fourth place teams.

First place Cissel Saxon was the 4-0 victim of third place Elks on the Elks' diamond. Second-place Silver Spring was ousted, 8-4, by Glen Echo, which barely gained the playoffs. Walter Covak, who hurled three-hit ball for Elks was Cissel Saxon's nemesis. Johnny Kerr, who hit a three-run homer at Silver Spring was Glen Echo's leading star.

Elks and Glen Echo open a two-out-of-three series for the league title next Sunday.

Chevy Chase Player Wins In Three Sets

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 8 (AP).—Gilbert Bogley of Chevy Chase, Md., won the National Junior Tennis championship today, upsetting first-seeded Richard Mouledous of New Orleans in the final. The scores were 6—1, 6—4, 6—3.

Mouledous, the 1947 runner-up, failed to launch against Bogley the brilliant offensive play that had brought him into the finals.

In the Boys' division, Hamilton Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., dislodged the 15-year-old defending champion, Bob Perry, of Los Angeles, in three lively sets, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

Bogley has another year to go in the junior ranks, but it was Mouledous' last chance at the title. In 1947 he fell to Herbert (Buddy) Behrens, of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., who was too old to defend his title this year.

Only once did Mouledous rise from his slump today. Trailing 4—0 in the second set, he rallied to take four games while his opponent was winning one. But he failed to hold out and Bogley, who covered his side of the court completely, had no trouble finishing off the match.

Bogley was seeded No. 3 in the tournament.

Bogley, the national scholastic and Eastern junior champ, had the New Orleans youngster on the ropes after cracking his service in the fourth game of the opening set.

Bogley ran up a 4—0 lead in the second set before Mouledous rallied to take four of the next five games. Leading 5—4 when the 10th game went to deuce, Bogley smashed a placement for the advantage and won set point on Dick's error.

Mouledous went ahead 2—1 in the third set and started crowding the net, but Bogley passed him frequently with steady shots and steamed into a 4—2 lead.

In the match game Bogley swept all but the first point.

Perry and Al Cleveland of Santa Monica, Calif., beat Ted Rogers of Chevy Chase, Md., and Tim Coss of Washington, D. C., 6—4, 6—4, for the boys' doubles title.

Fairfax Is Upset As County Loop Race Tightens

Falls Church Garage tightened up the Eastern Fairfax County League race yesterday by upsetting first-place Fairfax, 6-5, at Falls Church.

McLean, Vienna and Annandale, each by winning, reduced the distance between first and seventh place to two games. Vienna's Porter borthers act combined to whip the White Sox, 9-8, at Vienna. Pitcher Pat Porter yielded only seven hits, while his outfielder brother, Frank, connected for two triples.

Annandale Righthander Ray Klinchoe missed a no-hitter by one out as his teammates punched a 13-0 win over Herndon. With two away in the ninth, Art LaFon slapped the only Herndon hit of the game, a clean single to left. McLean tallied three times in the eighth to beat Falls Church, 6-4. Fairfax heads the standings with 7-3, with Falls Church Garage and Vienna tied for second place with 6-4.

Lefty Tom Reed, 16-year-old graduate of Bladensburg High, pitched a no-hit, no-run game yesterday as Bladensburg defeated Greenbelt, 7-0, in a Prince Georges Suburban League game at the winner's field.

It was the third straight shutout for the 6-foot fastballer, who fanned 18 and walked only two, the only Greenbelters to reach first base. The victory was the second in three games for the Bladensburgers, and boosted them into a tie for second place with Snug Harbor and Triangle.

Snug Harbor dropped a 4-0 decision to league-leading Lee's Tavern at Snug Harbor, and Triangle earned a ninth-inning 4-3 triumph over Mount Rainier at Triangle.

O'Neill struck out 10 in tossing his second straight shutout. During his last 18 innings, he hasn't permitted an opponent to reach third base. Two unearned runs in the seventh inning gave the Plumbers a 4-0 record in second half play.

Wells, former Georgetown University star, stopped a ninth-inning Colesville rally with the tying and winning runs on base by striking out the dangerous Jim Anderson to end the game. May's Title Event Ends in 3-Way Tie

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Successive course-sizzling rounds of a 64 by Dutch Harrison and a record 63 by Lloyd Mangrum, and Sam Snead's closing 69, threw George S. May's $10,000 winner-take-all golf tourney into a three-way tie today.

An 18-hole playoff to crack the triple deadlock at 135, nine under par for the 36 holes, will be played tomorrow afternoon.

$20,000 Target for Him

Mangrum, gunning for an unprecedented take of $20,000, in a week's tournament shooting, scorched the first nine in 32, four under par, and came back with an even better five-under 31.

Little Lloyd, winner of the $5000 All-American first prize and a $5000 bonus from his boss, Promoter May, had nine birdies and nine pars in his phenomenal 63 round.

Both Snead and Mangrum teed for the final green each needing a birdie to top Harrison, who earlier had matched the Tam o' Shanter course record with 64. Each settled for a par four, but that was good enough to win Mangrum $2500 for a new course mark.

Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn., finished fourth in the hand-picked field of 12 professionals, two strokes off the pace with 137. He tacked a four-under-par 68 onto his yesterday opening 69.

Ransom, Heafner at 138

Deadlocked at 138 were Henry Ransom of Chicago and Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., each with 67s for the day.

The 12-man amateur phase of the "World" title meet was won with an exceptional 136 by Bill Campbell of Huntington, W. Va., whose closing 65, seven under par, set a new Tam amateur record. Former Princeton golf captain Campbell hammered 32-33 to finish five strokes ahead of Frank Stranahan of Toledo, British and Canadian champion.

Babe Zaharias of Ferndale, N. Y., all-American women's open winner, also copped the five-girl "world" pro tourney with 149. Patty Berg was second with 152. Carol Diringer of Tiffin, Ohio, topped seven women amateurs with 152.

Braves Snuff Rally To Outlast Cubs, 6-3

Boston, Aug. 8 (AP).—Boston's National League leading Braves choked off a ninth-inning rally today and defeated the last-place Chicago Cubs, 6-3, before an overflow "Appreciation Day" crowd of 41,527, third largest paid attendance in the history of Braves Field. The throng shot the club's home attendance mark up to 1,019,693.

"When the sign went up that England won we thought it was some kind of mistake. An official told us we both had our hands on the baton when I was outside the zone and Ewell was still in it."

The other members of the sprint team with Ewell and Wright were Harrison Dillard, the 100-meter champion who ran third, and Mel Patton, the 200 meter champion, who ran anchor. Patton came home a good 10 yeards ahead of Jack Archer, the British anchor man.

Jim Stevens Star With Four Hits

Bunker Hill went on a six-run spree in the seventh inning and outlasted Government Printing Office, 13-12, yesterday on the Ellipse to win the junior American Legion baseball championship for the second straight year.

Jimmy Stevens, Eastern High outfielder, led the way for the Hillmen with four singles which knocked in four runs. Jack Brosnan, Coolidge High first baseman, contributed four singles to GPO's attack.

Bunker Hill represents Washington August 22 at Parkersburg, W. Va., in the legion's regional tournament, in which winners in Delaware, West Virginia and Maryland will also participate.

After yesterday's game, the American Legion's new Washington department commander, David Kizluck, presented the Bunker Hill boys with new jackets.

Presidential Order May Give Permanent Status to Hundreds

The President may issue an order that would lead to permanent status for hundreds, if not thousands, of long-time war service employes.

I'm sure of these three points: (1) that influential members of the Senate and the House have urged the President to issue such an order; (2) that the matter has been given serious study at the White House, and (3) that the Civil Service Commission is opposed to any such order.

Also, it's taken for granted that Chairman Rees of the House Civil Service Committee, and other GOP leaders in Congress would oppose any such order. Rees has opposed all orders to blanket in employes.

The White House is reliably reported to have rejected proposed orders which would lead to permanent status for large blocs of war service and temporary employes. For example, it had been suggested that every employe who had been in the Federel service for more than five years have his job blanketed into Civil Service by the President. When this suggestion was turned down, its advocates proposed the limit be raised to eight years but apparently this plan also was rejected.

Now the sponsors are aiming for an order to cover "meritorious" cases—people who have been in the Government service for years and who haven't been able to get a permanent status for one thoughtless reason or the other.

And Civil Service officials are the first to admit that there are many hundreds of such cases—people who have really earned and deserve permanent status. But Civil Service is opposed to any lowering of the barriers on the argument that any such order would lead to pressure to be included from uncovered groups.

The President has full authority either to include or exempt jobs from the Civil Service system. In past orders when jobs were blanketed into the permanent Civil Service, the occupants in the positions were permitted to acquire permanent status by merely passing a noncompetitive test.

MARITIME: The Senate Expenditures Committee has done the unusual. It has made constructive suggestions for the reorganization of the Maritime Commission which have been adopted by that agency. The Senate committee could have raised the devil about waste and inefficiency—a sure way to make the headlines—but it preferred to be constructive and objective.

The revamping puts most of the agency's operating functions under George D. Marshall, the new general manager. Reporting to Marshall are these seven bureaus: management, services, law, finance, government aids, marine operation, and engineering. John Conkey is slated to be Marshall's assistant.

RFC: Harley Hise, the new chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., got his start in the Federal service. One of his first jobs was as an auditing clerk in the Justice Department here, from 1913 to 1919. He left the Government in 1922 to go to California, where he earned fame and fortune.

The appointment of Hise as RFC chairman is a popular one with the agency's employes. RFC has been headless and floundering for weeks. The employes are banking on Hise to put new life into the organization.

NOTES: James Burns is now assured of a large bloc of votes from Philadelphia's AFGE lodges. He's running for reelection as president of the AFL employe union . . . AFGE's special police association has elected these officers: E. F. O'Hare, Thomas I. Murray, C. D. Bacher and Cleo Brown . . . Per diem employes at the Navy's Bethesda Medical Center are paid lower salaries than employes in similar work in other Federal agencies. The Navy has complete authority to grant them equal salaries which it should do promptly.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES: Rating notices have been sent to competitors who took last year's accountant and auditing test. More than 3900 passed; 3500 failed it . . . A new drive has been launched to find jobs for displaced career employes who are eligible for 32 types of jobs in grades below CAF-14 and P-7 . . . An exam for printer's assistant to fill about 500 jobs at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing will be announced shortly . . . And about 600 appointments will be made from an engineer exam to be announced later this month.

Man Beaten Critically by Gang of Four

Waiter Slugged Near Home; Woman Takes Part in Two Attacks On Late Workers

Police today were seeking three men and a woman believed responsible for unprovoked attacks on two men early yesterday.

Schuppin, according to police, was attacked almost in front of his home about 1 a. m. as he returned from work at Alfonso's Restaurant, 1403 L st. nw.

His attackers, three men and a red-haired woman, struck him over the head with an unidentified object. As Schuppin fell to the pavement, police said, the gang apparently was frightened off by approaching pedestrians and fled.

Unconscious When Found

Schuppin's daughter, Mrs. Ida J. Miller, of the H st. address, hearing sounds of the scuffle, ran to the street where she found her father unconscious.

Schuppin had $100 in his pocket and police believe robbery was the motive for the assault. His attackers were frightened off before getting the money, police assume.

Hast, an employe of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, was walking home from work with two fellow-employes, he told police, when he noticed a car with a group of men and women parked in a driveway near 24th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Attack Without Warning

Hast declared that, without warning, two of the men and a woman ran up to him, one grabbing him and exclaiming "What did you say?"

Hast told police that when he answered "nothing," one of the group clubbed him with a soft drink bottle. His attackers then fled in the car, he said. The only clew Hast could furnish police was that the auto carried Virginia tags.

In other assaults over the weekend, Johnny Walker, 34, of 429 3d st. sw., suffered stab wounds of the chest as a result of an argument with Walter Schuller, 28, same address. Walker was admitted to Gallinger Hospital in an undetermined condition and Schuller was held on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

An argument over religion between two inmates of the Blue Plains Home for the aged, Saturday night resulted in the cutting of Samuel Stewart, 63 and the arrest of William Carter, 63. Stewart was treated at Gallinger Hospital Carter was charged wit hassault with a dangerous weapon.

James E. Williams, 42, of 1134 C st. ne., was slashed with a knife in an argument with his brother Richard, 34, same address after the pair returned from a fishing trip late Saturday.

Williams was admitted to Casualty Hospital in an undetermined condition with face and body cuts. Richard was charged with assault.

Washingtonians Find Refuge in Sea of Sun

Drowsy Denizens Of District Enjoy Perfect Weather Over Weekend

Drowsy denizens of workaday Washington found refuge from their labors in a sea of sun yesterday—what the Weather Bureau described as "just a perfect August day."

Rock Creek Park was a haven for strollers and picnickers who preferred nature at hand to that of seashore and mountains. The Potomac shore was dotted with half-clad sun bathers who had a yen for the nautical touch.

More energetic weekenders crowded tennis courts, swimming pools, golf links and bridle paths. But most avocational pursuits seemed to be of a more aimless sort, perchance influenced by benevolent sunlight and soothing breezes.

Sailors Undaunted

Failure of the wind to exceed a velocity of 10 miles an hour did not deter even sailing enthusiasts, though many found their oars useful in returning to port.

Activity at the Marina Sailing Basin, a mile south of National Airport near George Washington Memorial highway, was brisk throughout the day.

The Government-built project, which will be the site of the President's Cup race this year, accommodates about 100 small sailing craft. A dozen boats are rented by operators of the club, and all 12 were in constant use yesterday.

Owners of private craft, when not under sail, puttered around with paint brushes and tools, making ready for stronger winds.

Has Flavor of Spring

The day itself may have been "perfect" for August, but it had an inescapable flavor of spring.

The Weather Bureau's chronicler said the mercury itself was lazy, having eased downward after reaching 81 degrees at 4:32 p. m. Low for the day was 61 degrees. Split the difference, and you have a mean of 71, or a healthy 5 degrees below normal for August 8.

Heberle Billed As CTC Fare Rise Witness

Hearing on a Capital Transit Co. request for a fare increase will continue at 10 a. m. today before the Public Utilities Commission in the District Building.

A cross-examination of J. E. Heberle, CTC vice president, by Harry R. Booth, counsel for the Washington Committee for Consumer Protection, is scheduled to open proceedings.

Booth clashed Friday with PUC Chairman James G. Flanagan after the latter advised Ben C. Sigal, president of the District Chapter, Americans for Democratic Action, opposing the increase, not to heed suggestions from other counsel.

CTC has asked for increases of from 10 to 15 cents for cash fare, two tokens for a quarter and weekly passes from $1.50 to $1.85.

Hyattsville Council Views Road Route

Hyattsville's city fathers went walking yesterday but a highway, not recreation, was the reason.

Members of the city council walked over the suggested alternate route which may be proposed to Prince Georges County commissioners for a cross-country highway.

The sugested alternate route would leave Hamilton st. near 38th st., then follow the right-of-way of the old Gettysburg-Washington Railroad, skirting the ball diamond in Magruder Park to Rhode Island ave. between old Dewey ave., and Paint Branch.

The group will discuss the proposal further at a special council meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the Hyattsville municipal building.

Man Steals Passkeys From K Street Hotel

A man shortly before last midnight stole the passkeys that open all rooms at the Prince Karl Hotel, 1901 K st. nw.

Night Clerk J. B. Kerr told police he had gone to a storeroom to get linen for a late-registering guest when the man, about 50, reached into the cash drawer and removed the three keys.

About $100 in cash in the drawer was untouched, he said.

Locking of 2 Girls in Room Sifted at Industrial School

The story of an Industrial Home School girl that she was locked in a room with another girl and told to "fight it out," was partially substantiated yesterday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hawkins, a counselor, said in a written report that she had found the two 14-year-old girls, who had been fighting, in the basement of their quarters. They had apparently "cooled off," however, she said, and she locked them temporarily in a large room in the basement.

Mrs. Hawkins in her written report to Gerard Shea, superintendent of the home, said nothing about telling the girls to "fight it out," and Shea said that she had denied doing so.

Mrs. Hawkins did not explain why she had locked the girls in the room. This, Shea said, was against regulations for those who are behavior problems, but not necessarily delinquent.

The girl, whose story disagreed in part with that of Mrs. Hawkins, was admitted to Gallinger Hospital for observation Friday after she had complained of not feeling well following the squabble. Injuries, if any, have not been determined.

Mrs. Hawkins' account to Shea said that on the morning of the fight the girls in the cottage had been assigned to their regular post-breakfast chores, some on the first floor—including the two girls involved in the squabble, and others on the second. Mrs. Hawkins went to the second floor to assist a new counselor.

Told by another girl that something was going on in the basement, Mrs. Hawkins said she went downstairs, found the two girls and asked, "Why did you stop your fighting when I came? What is all this fighting about?"

The two girls seemed to have cooled off, her statement said, "and I put them in a large room in the basment.

"I checked several times and they seemed to have had no more trouble," and said they were all right." Mrs. Hawkins said the girls had loaned each other clothes to get ready for dinner.

"I did not see any part of the fight at any time," she said, "and I would have reported her condition had I known there was anything wrong."

Shea said Mrs. Hawkins' report would be forwarded to John W. Tramburg, director of the Department of Public Welfare, today.

Group to Wage Clean-up Fight On 'Tract 48'

Preliminary plans for a four-way attack on "horrible" social conditions cited in Census Tract 48 were made yesterday by a group of about 20 citizens of the area.

The group, known as the Community Council of Tract 48, met at the Ephesus Seventh Day Adventist Church under the chairmanship of James F. Montgomery, a District school teacher.

First in the list of community reforms planned by the council is a clean-up of residential and public premises in the tract, which is bounded by New Jersey and New York aves., 7th st. and Florida ave. nw.

Montgomery said the litter and garbage thrown into back yards and alleys makes a "really terrific" rat problem.

Six boys brought to the meeting by Chester A. Walker, an employe of the Silver Spring (Md.) intermediate school who is interested in community recreation, told of inadequate playgrounds in Tract 48.

Montgomery instructed the program committee and Frank D. McKinney, president of the East Central Civic Association, to press the recreation department for more facilities, and to invite the department to send a representative to the Council's next meeting, scheduled for 8 p. m. on August 23 at the Ephesus Church.

The program committee will also ask the Health Department for an investigation of health hazards in the neighborhood, which the committee said were among the "horrible conditions" there.

A temperance crusade was pledged by Thomas J. Delaney, a member of the Council, to be aided by church organizations.

Churches represented at yesterday's meeting were the Ephesus, Galbraith A. M. E. Z., Shiloh Baptist, Third Baptist and Turner Memorial A. M. E.

2 Maryland Men Killed In Traffic; Woman Dies

Groveton, Va., Boy Critically Injured As Car Plows Off Highway Into Yard

Two nearby Maryland men died yesterday of injuries suffered in weekend traffic accidents, while in Groveton, Va., a 5-year-old boy was critically injured when a car careened off the highway and struck him as he played in the yard of his uncle's home.

Another traffic victim, Mrs. Gladys McCulloch, 49, of 311 Oneida pl. nw., died at 2:15 p. m. yesterday in Alexandria Hospital.

Mrs. McCullouch was injured last Sunday when the car in which she was a passenger collided with a truck on Route 1, four miles south of Alexandria.

Killed in one of the Maryland mishaps was George Wesley Morton, 26, a carpenter at the Crownsville State Mental Hospital. He was thrown to the road when his motorcycle went out of control on Generals' Highway in Crownsville Saturday night. He died at Emergency Hospital of head injuries yesterday morning.

U. S. Women Pampered, Congresswoman Tells Girls

94 Delegates Here From 47 States to Study Government

American women have not taken their proper role in politics because they have been pampered, Representative Katherine St. George (R., N. Y.) said last night.

Mrs. St. George, addressing the Girl's Nation, a five-day study of the Federal Government sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, said women gave a number of reasons for not taking a more active part in politics.

"The real reason, though," she continued, "is that American women are rather used to being carried around on a roseleaf and having everything handed to them."

There is no other country in the world, she told the 94 girls from 47 States attending the Girls' Nation on American University campus, whose women receive so much. "Therefore American women owe their country more than women in other countries do."

"Many women say they don't like the thought of campaigning. I don't either," the blond congresswoman said. "There is nothing so deflating to the ego. If you don't know what is wrong with you, just go through a campaign."

The old days when women in politics were supposed to be masculine are gone forever, Mrs. St. George said. "Women in politics should be themselves."

Expressing hope that the girls most of whom are now 16 or 17 years old, would enter politics, she told them: "Always put your family first, but after that go out and do what you can for your country."

Mrs. St. George was introduced by Mrs. E. A. Campbell of Homer, La., chairman of Girls' Nation. Mrs. Campbell told the girls that "in the last Presidential election women cast the majority of votes, but the full force of women in politics has not been felt."

The girls received instruction in how to hold party conventions to nominate candidates, then separated into two groups, "Nationalists" and "Federalists," and chose their nominees. The elections will follow tonight.

The girls spent yesterday afternoon touring Washington and historic spots in nearby Virginia. They laid a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery and at the grave of George Washington at Mount Vernon. A picnic supper on the American University campus was held upon their return.

The girls will tour the Capitol this morning and be greeted by President Truman at the White House at 11:15 a. m.

They will meet Secretary of State Marshall at the State Department at 3 p. m., and hear Miss Oleda Schrottky, a Girl Scout field representative, this evening. The program will conclude Thursday.

Dies At Wheel

W. E. Peake, Newsman, Heart Victim

William E. Peake of Riva, Md., former Washington newspaperman, died Saturday night as he was driving his car on the Crain Highway near the Pigeon House Inn, Anne Arundel, County.

Wm. Peake

As Mr. Peake slumped over the steering wheel, the auto left the roadway and crashed into a pole. Dr. John M. Claffy, Anne Arundel County medical examiner, stated death was caused by a heart attack.

Funeral services for Mr. Peake will be held Tuesday at 11:30 a. m. at the Lee funeral home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Associates recalled Mr. Peake as being of the "old school" of newspapermen as personified in plays like "The Front Page."

Colorful and always enthusiastic as far as a news story was concerned, friends say, any sort of a "tip" on a possible item would start him on the trail—not to leave it until the story was either disproved or tracked down.

Mr. Peake was the driver of the car in which another newspaperman, Daniel de Souza, then president of the Washington Chapter of the American Newspaper Guild, was killed during Christmas week, 1934.

The men were en route to distribute gifts to the children of striking newsmen in Newark, N. J., when their car crashed into a stalled truck on the Washington-Baltimore blvd.

Born in Washington in 1901, Mr. Peake was educated at McKinley Technical School. During the First World War, although under age for military service, he joined the merchant marine.

Later he worked in the New York Herald-Tribune's Washington Bureau, on the old Washington Times and the Washington Times-Herald and The Washington Post.

Surviving are his wife, Olive; a son, William G. Peake; a brother, Warren, of Hay Market, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Dorothy Chamberlain, Hyattsville.

Warren G. Noll, 66, retired Government architect who designed the new Internal Revenue Building here, died Friday in Garfield Hospital. He had been partially paralyzed since suffering a cerebral hemorrhage four years ago.

Mr. Noll

Mr. Noll, who lived at 3437 14th st. nw., was chief of architecture of the Public Buildings Administration, Federal Works Agency, when he retired six years ago.

The Internal Revenue Building was the only public building designed by the Government itself, instead of by a private concern.

Born in Philadelphia, Mr. Noll was educated at Drexel Institute of Technology. At 21, he went to work here in the supervising architect's office of the Treasury Department. He remained in that office for 40 years, until his retirement in 1942, transferring with the architect's office to the Federal Works Agency in 1933.

He was a member of the Association of Federal Architects.

Taft-Hartley Act Repeal Loses In WINX Debate

Repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act lost a three-to-one decision in a verbal clash over station WINX last night.

Two members of the House Labor Committe sided with John W. Whittlesey, labor attorney for the United States Chamber of Commerce, in advocating necessary changes in the law by amendment rather than by repeal.

They are Representatives O. C. Fisher (D., Tex.) and Charles J. Kersten (R., Wis.).

Philip Pearl, director of information for the American Federation of Labor, called for repeal of the Act. He said its aplication is "unilateral in that labor leaders only are compelled to sign affidavits that they are not members of the Communist Party."

Whittlesey maintained that the question of membership in the Communist Party does not constitute a threat when applied to individuals in management. Both Congressmen agreed with him that the affidavit clause is a desirable requirement of the law.

Prior to his 10-year association with the Agnew firm, he was employed for 25 years by the J. Maury Dove Coal Co. and its successor, the American Ice Co., at 1515 F st. ne., as salesman and sales manager.

Guard Home From 2 Weeks Of Training

Bone weary after the day-long trip from Camp Pendleton, Va., District National Guardsmen rolled into home base yesterday afternoon to wind up their two-week summer training.

Trucks unloaded and gear checked in, they heard "the eagle scream" (Army lingo for pay day) and returned to civilian life.

From rookies to wartime veterans the word on the encampment was "good." To the officers who trained them, the performance of the men had been excellent.

Come by Bus and Truck

The men arrived at the District Guard Armory by bus and truck, with the first contingent pulling in at 1:45 p. m. All 770 officers and men had been paid and were on their way home by 6:20 p. m.

Only casualty was a truck that broke down near Richmond and was towed in.

Some good-natured griping was aired over conditions during the early part of the encampment as the men unloaded their equipment. The barracks leaked, reported one; he would have preferred to live in a tent. Another said he hadn't got enough sleep, but admitted he visited nearby Virginia Beach every evening.

Said T/5 Louis Dantuono, 20, of 41 Kennedy st. ne., who got his first taste of Army life: "The first week was pretty well messed up. No mess kits, for one thing." All in all, he found the training period interesting.

What They Thought of It

"I enjoyed it. It was good experience. Now I know what the Army is like," he said. Dantuono is a barber.

Staff Sergt. Frank T. Dugan, 25, of 3240 S. 35th st., Fairlington, also enjoyed the training. Dugan, who in private life is learning to be a dental technician, reported his outfit, the 104th Ordnance Company, had no equipment shortage and "got its mission across."

It was "a good two weeks" to T/Sergt. Max E. Van Horn, 34, of 2841 Naylor rd. se. An Eighth Air Force veteran, Van Horn has decided to be "on the other end of the gun this time."

Col. LeRoy S. Mann, commanding officer of the 260th Antiaircraft Artillery Group, to which most of the District Guardsmen are assigned, said:

"We got just a little more done all along the way than we expected to."

Recruits, originally scheduled to receive only basic training, got in firing practice as well and were assigned to gun crews, he said. He explained that the early shortages of equipment were overcome before they affected training.

Boston Will Be DP Entry Port, McCormack Says

By The Associated Press

Representative McCormack (D., Mass.) said yesterday Boston will be the port of entry for displaced persons from Europe when the program is initiated by the Federal Government.

McCormack said he had recommended use of Boston by UGO Carusi, who has been nominated chairman of the displaced persons commission.

McCormack reported that Carusi assured him that Boston "definitely would be in the picture, and that he would discuss this matter further with immigration officials in Boston to facilitate housing arrangements."

120-Lb. Tokyo, Burglar Picks Wrong 'Victim'

Tokyo, Aug. 8 (AP).—A 120-pound burglar made a horrible mistake last night when he attempted to rob the home of Setsuo Nagata.

The householder weighs more than 250 pounds and is the retired grand champion of Japanese-style wrestling. He threw the burglar for a fall quicker than it takes to tell this, then calmly called police.

Hospital Loses $423

An envelope containing $423 was reported missing yesterday from Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital office.

Air Force Rapidly Expanding B-29 Atom Bomber Groups

By the United Press

The Air Force is rapidly building up its B-29 Superfortress striking force, the outfit that would hit back at any enemy attacking the United States.

There are eight groups of 30 each of the big atom-bomb-carrying bombers already organized within the United States. There are five more overseas plus a squadron in Alaska.

Three groups of 30 each, or a total of 90, are in England, including 30 now en route. Another 30 planes are in Germany but are scheduled to return to the United States shortly. A fourth group of 30 is in Guam, in the western Pacific.

That makes a total of 13 groups or 390 planes, trained and ready to go into action anywhere in the world with a few hours notice.

The Air Force plans to increase its medium and heavy bomber force to 21 groups next July. From four to six of the groups will be B-29 Superforts, now called "medium bombers" since the advent of the larger, six-engine B-36, the bomber with the 10,000-mile range. A B-29 has a range of 5000 miles.

The other two to four groups will be composed of B-36s and the newer B-50. The B-50 is a vastly improved version of the B-29 with greater range, speed and bomb-carrying capacity.

The Air Force has 2800 B-29 Superforts. It now has 800 of these out of storage. More are rapidly being pulled out as crews are recruited and trained.

Factional Tilt Delays Labor Crisis in Japan

Tokyo, Aug. 8 (AP).—A struggle between Communists and moderates in union locals delayed the expected development of the Japanese national labor crisis today.

Unions representing three million government workers had threatened to strike for more pay at the end of a cooling-off period Saturday, despite a cabinet decree.

Instead, only two small walkouts by railway workers were reported.

District Air National Guard Reviewed on Governor's Day

The D. C. Air National Guard, midway in its 15-day training program at Dover (Del.) Air Force Base, yesterday passed in review aloft and on the ground in ceremonies observing the annual Governor's Day.

As part of the 64-plane aerial salute, 16 F-47 fighter planes of the District's 121st Fighter Squadron, led by Maj. Willard W. Millikan, of 3346 Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, passed over Wilmington and Philadelphia before participating in the air base ceremonies.

Earlier, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding the D. C. National Guard, inspected District Air Guard training facilities. General Cox said he was "well satisfied with the work and progress in training at the half-way point of this summer encampment."

Present for the Governor's Day ceremonies, besides General Cox, were Gov. William Tuck of Virginia, William J. Storey, Delaware Secretary of State, who represented Gov. Walter Bacon, and Brig. Gen. Frank A. Weber, adjutant general of Pennsylvania.

They stood on the reviewing stand, together with Fifty-third Air Guard Wing Commander Col. John Weltman, as the fighter planes passed overhead in perfect formation. Air Guardsmen not airborne, 800 in number, marched in formal review before the State officials.

Top individual marksman of Wing combat maneuvers thus far is Lieut. Clifton M. Eisele, jr., 25, of Riverdale, Md. The Associated Press reported he has had 71 hits out of 245 rounds fired at a towed sleeve target.

In squadron competition, Richmond's 104th Squadron has taken the lead, followed by the 148th of Reading, Pa., Washington's 121st, and the 104th of Baltimore.

New Baby Should Not Be Surprise

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Most mothers are aware that it is necessary to prepare the older child for the coming of a new baby. Not only is this essential from the standpoint of the child's own emotions, but in order to forestall behavior difficulties arising from jealousy.

A new baby may be one of the major calamities of a child's life. If he has been an "only" for some years, the wrench of giving up his position as king of the household is a bitter pill indeed, and one whose bitterness should be alleviated by the mother's anticipation of it.

The child should know, at least two months in advance, that there is another child coming into the family. More than two months makes the time seem too long for a young child to wait and yearn for the happening.

Mother Explains

Let the mother point out in the neighborhood, or family of relatives, the children who have the joy of a little brother or sister to care for and love.

Don't make the mistake of picturing the new baby as this child's playmate. There is too much disappointment when the child discovers that he cannot share his play or toys with this fragile, new baby.

It is well to introduce him to the new baby when he, too, can be given some attention. Guests or relatives should be considerate of the older child, greet him lovingly, ask him to show them the little brother or sister.

Whenever demands are made upon him to "be quiet" or "keep hands off," it should be explained that this is exactly the way he was treated when he was a baby. As each task for baby is completed the mother may reiterate, "This is what we did for you when you were a baby."

Shares Limelight

This puts the child in the limelight, satisfies him about his own infancy and dissipates the emotion he might otherwise feel at having to be quiet, or not handle the baby as he might want to do.

This is a period of real adjustment for any older child and its difficulties should be appreciated. Now, the joys of being older, of having more privileges than the baby—as well as greater responsibilities—should be emphasized. Thus the child makes the transition from only child to one of a family without feeling such intense resentment toward the helpless newcomer.

The Gas Range

Never use blacking on the gas range; the heat is insufficient to absorb the blacking and the first thorough cleaning it will all rub off. A rag dipped in kerosene is a good cleaner for every part of the gas stove. A crumpled newspaper rubbed over the burners removing the grease is an excellent habit to include along with your daily duties.

Use of Sewing Machine

How many of us have all the attachments of our sewing machine but never use any of them? It is only a question of learning how, and a half hour at the shop where the machine was purchased would save many hours of labor at home.

This pretty miss knows the value of the sun as a bleach, so she hangs her linens out-of-doors to dry.

Linens Need Care to Prolong Their Wearing Qualities

"Wait 'til the sun shines, Nellie," then wash yellowed linens and hang them out to whiten Nature's way. The sunshine on the wet linens will help restore them to snowy whiteness and preserve the crispness of their texture.

Here are a few "do's and don'ts" suggested by the Irish Linen Guild, to help you with the job:

(1) Never pin tablecloths and napkins, sheets and pillowcases up by the corners. Always hang them folded over the line. Hanging pieces by the corners puts undue strain on the fabric, besides pulling the corners into peaks that are difficult to iron out square again.

(2) As each piece is pinned over the line, run the fingers down the hems to straighten it out.

(3) Iron all types of household linen quite damp. Set the heat control at the highest point and iron first on the wrong side, then on the right.

(4) Embroidered pieces should be ironed on the wrong side only with a soft pad or terry towel spread over the ironing board so that the embroidery design will not be flattened.

(5) Do not iron the folds in napkins to a razor-sharp edge, but press them down with the fingers. Linen fiber is very strong, but it also is relatively elastic and will break if repeatedly bent at the same spot.

(6) Tablecloths have to be ironed with a fold down the center because of their size. The exact point where this crease occurs can be rotated by folding the cloth down the center one time, a quarter of an inch off center to the right next time and a quarter of an inch to the left another time.

(7) If unexplained holes develop outside areas where wear is expected, the blame can be traced to some member of the family. Sports enthusiasts sometimes trace a winning football play on the tablecloth with a fork. Or you yourself may be drying knives with the dish towel, dragging against the cutting edge. None of you may really cut a perceptible hole through the fabric, but you are weakening and breaking fibers which will develop into actual worn places in time.

Home Recreation Is Urged as Aid To Family Budget

Faced with higher and higher cost for the "necessities" of life, many American families are now beginning to spend less money on entertainment and recreation, according to experts of the National Recreation Association quoted by the Women's Division of the Institute of Life Insurance. With careful planning, however, the association thinks these families may still maintain their recreation standards and perhaps end up with actually more and better recreation than they had before.

Before a budget-worried family sets up a new recreation budget, the association urges that all members of the family review together the possible steps they can take to develop better ways to entertain and have fun together at less cost. One of these ways, says the association, is through greater use of community recreation facilities. Another way is through more recreation in their own neighborhood and a third way is by encouraging more recreation in their home.

Organized and unorganized home recreation, according to the association, is many times a sadly neglected technique for family happiness and incidentally for family solvency. Games, art projects, musical "performances," front porch and backyard picnics, gardening, and home-made entertainments can all be managed at little cost and can provide far more rewarding recreation than many kinds of expensive "evenings out."

All sorts of personal and published helps for better home recreation are available in most communities, the association declares. Its own booklet, "Home Play," can be borrowed from most public libraries. Many Federal, State and local government agencies also publish material on the subject. Yet probably the best sources for a family program are the family's own traditions and the parents' memories of happy times in their own childhood.

Mrs. Knowlton Turns to Fiction for New Book

By Marie McNair

STEMMING from a hardy New England family which produced Charles Dana Gibson, originator of the Gibson Girl, it's no surprise that the artist's sister is a success in her own line.

Raising turtles in her Phelps pl. garden is Mrs. Daniel Knowlton's hobby. Writing about them is the former Josephine Gibson's pleasure, and I might add, profit. For "My Turtles," written, as the author says, "for those who know nothing of turtles and for those who know much and wish to learn more, found a ready sale.

MRS. MCNAIR

Mr. and Mrs. Knowlton are leaving on Friday for their home in Rhode Island to be close at hand for the annuual "tennis week at Newport," which opens on the 16th. And Mrs. Knowlton is leaving town with the satisfied feeling that her latest book is finished, is soon to be on the presses, with publication date set for October 1.

In this newest production of Josephine Knowlton's pen the author tackles a new field—for her. She's written a novel and she calls it "The Innocent Cause."

"The subject is old," says Mrs. Knowlton, "marriage and divorce. But it is free from the many plots that are used as the cause of divorce and there's no villain or war in the story."

Just as cover illustrations of her first book were Gibson turtles, Mrs. Knowlton has borrowed one of the late Charles Dana Gibson's famous pin-up girls of the Gay Nineties for the jacket of her book. "The Innocent Cause" is just that sort of girl.

THINGS I Never Knew 'Til Now Dept.:

According to ancient Siamese dogma luck-bringing charms are colors. Monday is yellow; Tuesday, pink; Wednesday, green; Thursday is orange; Friday's color is blue; it's black for Saturday and Sunday's lucky color is red.

So—when the Siamese Ambassador, His Royal Highness Prince Wan Waithayakon, celebrates his birthday on August 25 there'll be a lot of green around the embassy, and I don't mean grass.

ONE OF the handsomest and most hospitable houses in town more than likely will be closed most of next winter. Former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Davies are contemplating spending most of the season cruising aboard their floating palace, the Sea Cloud. Just now the Davies are at Camp Topridge, their Adirondacks estate, one of the real luxury spots in the mountain area.

I know—but I promised not to tell.

Mary Carter Engaged to Midshipman

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary Cary Ambler Carter, daughter of Commodore and Mrs. Worrall Reed Carter of Norfolk, Va., to Midshipman Edward Samuel Carver, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Carver of Pullman, Wash.

Miss Carter is a graduate of the National Cathedral School for Girls, Washington, and is now a student at the Maryland College for Women, Lutherville, Md. She is the granddaughter of the late Judge and Mrs. Thomas H. Willcox of Norfolk and of Mrs. Charles J. Carter of Yarmouth, Me., and the late Captain Carter, USN. The bride-elect made her debut at the Norfolk German Club last season.

Mr. Carver attended the University of New Mexico and will be graduated from the United States Naval Academy next June.

Lloyds

Miss Anne Tanner, whose mother, Mrs. Grace S. Tanner of Arlington, Va., announces her engagement to J. E. Tremblay, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Francis E. Tremblay of Albany, N. Y.

At White Sulphur

Maj. and Mrs. N. W. Sanders of Arlington are at the Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for a summer vacation. Also there for several weeks is Mrs. George Randolph.

On California Trip

Mr. and Mrs. John Clifford Folger and their son are spending a few days at the Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach, Calif., during their trip to California.

Visitors Here Come From Plantations

Interesting visitors in Washington, stopping at the Mayflower are Mrs. George S. Yerger of Mound, La., and Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Learned of Natchez, Miss., whose northern visit will include a leisurely motor trip through New England.

Mrs. Yerger and Mr. and Mrs. Learned stopped in Washington primarily to visit briefly their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Montgomery. On arrival in this country from Scotland, some 30 years ago, a young man just out of the university, Mr. Montgomery spent three years with the Yerger's, who always insist that when he retires he must return to one of the family estates awaiting him in the South.

Owners of vast lumber and cotton lands, Mrs. Yerger and Mr. and Mrs. Learned are members of a family which have lived in Louisiana since its earliest history. The Learned family occupy a house in Natchez which has been continuously in the family since ante-bellum days and which is one of the show places of that romantic city.

An interesting anecdote reveals that Mrs. Yerger's six sons, now leading industrialists of the South, accompanied her to church last Easter in the plantation chapel, and in the family pews also, were 21 descendants of varying ages.

Mrs. Williams Becomes Bride

The marriage of Mrs. Nancy Crawford Williams and Lieut. Col. Alvin Charles Welling took place on Friday, August 6, in the sacristy of St. Matthew's Cathedral.

The Rev. Milton A. Schellenberg officiated at the ceremony at 9 a. m. in the presence of the immediate family. Lieut. Col. and Mrs. John Buehler were the only attendants.

The bride is the daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Roscoe Campbell Crawford. Colonel Welling is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Welling of Covington, Ky. He was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in the class of 1933.

Volunteers Make Million Dressings For Red Cross Use

Red Cross volunteers made 1,194,291 surgical dressings in the fiscal year just ended, according to Mrs. Fred Rieth, chairman of the Production and Supply Service of the District Red Cross.

The surgical dressings unit, headed by Mrs. Olaf Solem, as chairman, is part of the production and supply service.

A total of 12,868 garments were made by the sewing unit of the service, Mrs. Reith reported. Articles were made for hospitals included gowns, aprons, bed shirts, face masks, bedside bags, surgeons caps, slippers, and glove wrappers. Mrs. Stephen Olap is chairman of the sewing unit.

Volunteers in the knitting unit, which is headed by Mrs. John H. Snyder as acting chairman, put in a total of 3,844 hours during the 12 months period, according to Mrs. Rieth. Among the knitting unit projects are the bright-colored afghans, which require 80 hours to make, and are knit for patients in military hospitals. When a patient leaves the hospital, the afgan becomes his own.

About Employment Agencies

Where would one go to apply for or see about a job with private contractors in foreign places. I am not speaking of Government jobs. B. S.

The United States Employment Service takes applications for private jobs in foreign countries, as well as for Government ones. A number of firms with offices abroad list their employe needs with the employment service. To find more about it, visit the USES office at 734 15th st. nw.

Could you tell me where I can buy a professional decorating set like the ones bakers use for decorating cakes? While in California, I learned to do decorating but since I am home, I don't know where to locate the tools I need. I have the sets like you buy in the stores but they are too small. I want to make large roses and so on. J. C. C.

There is a local bakery supply company that sells these large decorating sets. To contact this concern, telephone Republic 6626.

Attention L. L.: Several readers have written in to say they make the type of corsages you asked about in your recent letter. One, L. F. J., makes very realistic ones of wood fiber, simulating many varieties of flowers. She may be reached by telephoning Decatur 4986 after 5:30 p. m. A reader who makes paper corsages is M. R. C., who c n be reached at Warfield 1267. Still another letter, from a reader who didn't give his phone number, is being forwarded to you.

I am planning a vacation in San Francisco and Los Angeles, Calif., starting about August 27 to the end of September, and would like to know what kind of clothes will be needed. I am told 'Frisco is rather cool,' but that, on the contrary, L. A. is pretty warm. B.

Suits will be quite appropriate in San Francisco, and probably in Los Angeles on cool days, at the time you visit California. You'll need a topcoat in San Francisco, and in Los Angeles in the evenings. Dark, smart-looking clothes will be in order in San Francisco, where women dress a good deal as do New Yorkers. In Los Angeles dark things can be worn also, but you'll find sports clothes in pretty, bright colors, nice to have, too. It would be a good idea to take along a few light summer rayon or cotton dresses. Fall hats will be in order in either city in September, although women in Los Angeles go without hats a great deal.

Will you recommend the kinds of pots an. pans that are essential for modern economical and nutritional cooking? I already have a four-quart pressure cooker and would like to buy the best utensils available for frying, cooking vegetables, roasting, etc. Is stainless steel superior to alumnium for pots and pans? Is a heavy cast-iron fryer better than a lightweight frying pan? A list of the best basic types of equipment would be much appreciated. M. N. B.

A whole pineapple full of frozen Daiquiries is the Brazilian way of serving cocktails to American guests at their sugar haciendas. Two straws make the sipping cozier, however

The choice of materials from which kitchen utensils are made is more or less a matter of personal preference. Some women prefer aluminum pots and pans because they heat more quickly. The bottom of an aluminum vessel should be fairly thick, however, or food will scorch easily. Aluminum can become pitted from certain acids and darkens when food with an alkali content is cooked in it, therefore frequent cleaning with steel wool is necessary.

Enameled cooking ware heats less quickly, but it resists stains and is easy to keep clean. It must be handled rather carefully, however, as the enamel may chip if it is knocked about or plunged into cold water while it is hot. Chipped utensils are unsanitary and should be discarded.

Stainless steel utensils are highly resistant to stains and easy to clean. This metal tends to heat unevenly and develop "hot spots" that scorch food. Such vessels often are made with copper bottoms to overcome this difficulty. However, copper-bottomed stainless steel ware is more expensive than other types.

Some homemakers prefer heat-resistant glassware for baking because the containers are often attractive enough to bring to the table and you can see exactly how well the food is cooking. Flame-proof glassware for use on top of the stove has the latter advantage, too. It has been greatly improved in recent years, but generally cannot be heated to as high a temperature as metal and must be handled with care to prevent breakage.

For frying, the castiron or other heavy metal frying pan is more satisfactory though slower to heat than a lightweight one. The food is not so likely to scorch in a heavy pan and it will cook more evenly. The pan itself won't become warped, as the lightweight ones often do. However, many women like to have a small, light pan for quick frying of small amounts of food, and a heavy larger one for more serious cooking.

1-qt. saucepan with cover
2-qt. saucepan with cover
1-qt. double boiler
6-qt. kettle with cover
1 9-in. pie pan
1 or 2 6-c. muffin pans
1 12-in. baking sheet
8- or 10-in. skillet
4- or 6-c. coffee maker
1-qt. casserole dish
1-pt. casserole dish
1 10-in.-by-15-in. open roaster
2 7- or 9-in. layer-cake pans or
1 6-by-10-in. sheet pan
1 4-in.-by-8-in. loaf pan
6 individual custard cups
1 broiler pan

How to Ruin a Vacation

Sun Tanning Haste Makes Misery

By Ida Jean Kain

The quickest way to ruin a two weeks' vacation is to try to get a suntan in one sitting—and the molting effect when you get back to the office is anything but glamorous. But most of us are prone to forget from one summer to the next just how potent Old Sol really is.

If you're at the seashore or the mountains, you don't feel the burn for the breeze—and you're well done before you sense the danger. So take your sun gradually this summer and get a nice, smooth tan . . . no blisters, no pain, no peeling.

The best hours for sun bathing are from dawn to 9 in the morning—the early bird doesn't get the burn—and the next best are from 4 p. m. until sundown. But since you're not likely to get up with the sun, or stay in the shade until late afternoon, here's a good rule to follow: Fifteen minutes in the direct rays of the sun between 10 in the morning and 3 in the afternoon is enough for a starter. And this is not just for sissies. Watch for danger signals. Staying out for just 10 minutes more after the skin begins to glow is enough to give a severe burn. And when the skin feels hot to the touch, you're done!

One health resort advises beginning with two minutes' exposure on each of the four sides of the body, with a five-minute intermission between exposures, and increasing the time by only one or two minutes each day.

Some redheads and blondes have an abnormal sensitivity to the sun's rays and always burn instead of brown. Sun tanning is not for them.

Nobody should be fooled by cloudy days. The sun may not feel so hot, but the rays that cause the burn come right through the vapor. What's more, you burn without tanning on hazy days.

Be sure to keep your head and eyes covered. To much sun in the eyes causes wrinkles and may bring on a headache that lasts for days. And too much on the hair can turn it into straw—the ultraviolet rays break down its cystine content and make it dry and brittle.

One more precaution: Avoid eating immediately after sun bathing and do not sun bathe immediately after eating. Wait a good 30 minutes before and after.

You need plenty of sun and fresh air this summer, but you don't have to stay in the direct rays of the sun to benefit. By playing safe, you can look and feel just as healthy—in fact a lot healthier than you can by getting a burn.

Paris' Hats for Autumn Revive Styles of Twenties

By Florence Mills

From Associated Press Newsfeatures

PARIS.—Paris milliners are delving back both to the days of Napoleon's Josephine and to the 1920's for inspiration in designing fall hats.

Every type of cloche, beret, turban and bonnet, and handsome cross breeds of all four, are being shown by leading houses.

Feathers, such as osprey, coque, pheasant, paradise and even vulture, are the main trimmings. Fur hasn't been shown by any house so far. Brilliants also are being widely used.

The front of the hat is the only place where there's any brim, and then, except for real poke bonnets, it's usually very brief, furled or like a narrow peak.

Gilbert Orcel's fall collection, shown recently, highlighted glamorous turbans, bonnet types that looked very like short coal skuttles and cloche numbers that fitted close to the head like skullcaps. He also showed numerous high-crowned berets squashed in to fit the head.

He makes turbans by swathing satin around felt or beaver crowns of contrasting color and sets them off with a fan of ostrich feathers in front. They come in a wide scale of colors ranging through deep crimson teamed with sage green, pale mauve velvet, grey linked with gold and turquoise, and imperial purple.

TOPPERS with 6-inch crowns and curly brims inject a novel note into the Orcel picture. He shows them in pastel colored beaver felts, worn slightly to the side-back of the head. He rounds off the series with one in glistening white satin surmounted with a string of diamonds.

Her latest idea in trimming is shown in masks superimposed on veiling which falls exactly to cover the eyes. A black velvet Dutch bonnet with tie-under-the-chin veiling had an eye length veil finishing in a mask dotted with black paillettes and outlined with black baby lace. This was repeated on a bonnet of crimson velvet. One in olive green felt was studded with tiny nut brown chenille dots which also served to outline a mask on brown tulle.

Vacation Was Fine, But It's Good to Be Home

Vacation diary:

THE PLAINS, VA.—The sun is so boiling hot we decide to stop for a drink. We order hot coffee, but somehow feel cooler anyhow.

SKYLINE CAVERNS, VA.—The caverns are always interesting, but unusually so on a day like this. The temperature ranges in the 50's, in spite of the sun outside.

SWIFT RUN GAP, VA.—"Is the Blue Ridge Parkway open to Route 60?" we ask the ranger on the Skyline Drive. "Oh, sure," he says. "The Skyline Drive runs right into it. Keep going straight ahead."

SOMEWHERE IN VIRGINIA—Ah, if I could only get my fingers around that ranger's throat now.

TEN MILES LATER—There must be human life nearby. We see smoke ahead. Or is it dust?

STILL LATER—We're saved! It's dust, and there's an auto ahead. We're coming to route 60.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. VA.—It's good to be back in civilization again, even if we can't possibly know a soul here, so far from home.

But on the first tee of the Greenbrier's beautiful golf course, a fellow walks over and says: "Playing alone? Care to join us? I'm Dr. Edward Cafritz of Washington, and this is Dr. Morton Finn, also of Washington. Ever been to Washington?

Trying to appear nonchalant about the whole thing, I reply: "I live there too, doctor—in a house owned by your brother."

Byrne Bauer of the Greenbrier staff shows us some of the hotel's old ledgers. They reveal that on July 20, 1817, there arrived for a three-day visit "Henry Clay, servant, and three horses." Their bill was $16.51½. Clay settled for $16.25, cash.

In August of the year before, "Stephen Decatur, lady, two servants and two horses" stopped at the Greenbrier for 16 days. The bill was $87.45. Each servant and each horse was charged for at half the master's daily rate which, for the better rooms, was $1.50.

When I ask Bauer whether these rates are still in effect, he answers wryly: "Our prices have gone up somewhat since those days."

Incidentally, when Wade H. Bynham checked out in August of 1816, he left $5 with the clerk for "the hostlers, the barber and Nellie."

LEWISBURG, W. VA.—The shaded, ante bellum front porch of the General Lewis Hotel is a wonderful place to eavesdrop of an evening. A drummer for a glass company says: "Aw—that guy's job requires absolutely nothing that couldn't be done by a boy of 18—provided he had 20 years experience at it."

An elderly lady whispers to her husband: "Father, I wonder if that man over there in the rocker could be Bernard Baruch." The husband glances over and shakes his head. "Looks like him all right, but if you'd go to find out you'd probably discover the hotel hires him to sit around here and give it atmosphere."

A traveling man at the other end of the porch is sounding off about traffic problems. "Now you take Bryan, Ohio," he says. "Up there, if you get a ticket for overtime parking and pay it within an hour, it costs only 10 cents. Within two hours, it costs half a dollar. Over that, you pay a dollar."

GAULEY BRIDGE, W. VA. A sure sign you're "out in the the country" is when folks refer to the long distance operator as "central."

BELLE, W. VA.—The Midland Trail runs right past the huge Du Pont ammonia plant here. It's struck, but open and running. It's plain even to a passerby that there's been trouble. There are pickets at every gate, and a State trooper for every picket.

CHESAPEAKE, OHIO — At long last, high-test gas at reasonable prices again. In Washington, it was 25.7 cents; on the Skyline Drive 29; in West Virginia 28. Here it's 26.5. The attendant says: "Shucks—down in Louisa, Ky., it's over 30 cents."

CINCINNATI, OHIO — The only thing that's changed is 6th and Vine sts. The corner is dominated by the solid, windowless mass of the brand-new and ultra-modernistic Terrace Plaza Hotel (about which Time Magazine's readers are still arguing).

The rest is the same: Jimmie Shevlin's fish and chop house, Al Shavel's "Barn," the pain-in-the-neck sales tax, the one-way streets, the traffic lights that change every 16 seconds, the shirt-sleeved males who refuse to don suit coats for lunch, even in the fancier restaurants. And Cincinnati isn't as humid as Washington.

The Gibson Hotel advertises, "Our new policy—meals from $1." Secretary of Commerce Charlie Sawyer, a local boy who made good, heads a sports syndicate which is building a new arena. "Sleepout Louie," who made Leonard Lyons' column recently, almost lost his life in a boating accident a few days later. At Crosley Field, the baseball fans are still as rabid as ever. The enemy shortstop throws one past first, and a half dozen Redleg rooters see to it that the first-baseman doesn't have a chance to retrieve the ball. The ump sighs and turns his back.

CLEVELAND, OHIO—Indian fans are no easier on the visiting team. But they cheer Bob Feller to an echo every time he hitches up his pants.

Hank Greenberg, who has a piece of the club, interviews Satchel Paige for the television cameras before the game. The kids crowd around Satch for autographs; Greenberg goes unrecognized.

But, stepping out of the elevator at the Wade Park Manor, I recognize the big slugger—after I almost step on his feet. It seems he's a neighbor.

PITTSBURGH, PA. — We must have come at the wrong time. Or maybe there's a truckers' convention in town. We spend an hour and a half getting through the city—always following a big truck.

PENNSYLVANIA TURNPIKE—Ah, this is more like it. We discover that our car will go 90 miles per hour, providing we first talk mama into taking a nap so that she won't back-seat-drive.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It was lots of fun, but there's no place like home. At Indian Springs, Frank Dennis and I defeat Shirley Povich and Bus Ham—the first time since the vacation started that I played winning golf. Yessir—there's no place like home.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—A long-haired composer visited Irving Berlin and saw the sales record of "White Christmas," which probably will gross more money than any other musical composition ever written. "That's gratifying, of course," said the serious composer, "but frankly, I have no interest in the commercial aspects of a song. My primary interest is in its artistic quality" . . . "Just because a song makes a lot of money, that doesn't necessarily mean it lacks artistic quality," replied Berlin. "Even a little Van Gogh painting costs $50,000. Would you say that it's purely a commerical item?"

Berlin went to a 57th st. art gallery a few days ago, and saw a Cezanne and a Renoir, priced at $45,000 each. He asked whether these were inflated prices. "Fifteen years ago you probably could have bought them at 10 per cent of the present price," said the dealer. "But perhaps 15 years from now they'll sell at five times as much." . . . Berlin smiled reminiscently, and said: "That's just what they told me about General Electric stock, just before the Wall Street crash in 1929."

James M. Cain, whose "Postman Always Rings Twice," "Mildred Pierce," "Double Indemnity" and "Serenade" all were filmed, tells how one of these stories was bought for pictures: The producers at the studio had read the digest of the book, and were undecided. One day when a producer's secretary was missing from her desk for two hours the producer ordered a search. "I was in the dressing room," the lady told him, "reading James Cain's new book. I became so engrossed in it that I lost track of time." The producer bought the film rights to the book.

What Went On in GOP Caucus

By Drew Pearson

GOP Senators locked themselves inside the Senate caucus room for three hours the other day to work out a legislative formula that would pacify the voters and still let Congress go home early. Here is an inside account of what happened at the meeting:

Revercomb

Sharpest clash was over the Displaced Persons Act which President Truman has called anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic. West Virginia's Chapman Revercomb, author of the act, defended it vigorously. He quoted some Catholic bishops as saying it wasn't anti-Catholic, and excused the anti-Jewish features by claiming 65 per cent of the postwar immigrants have been Jews. They have been admitted to this country under the regular immigration quotas, he explained.

Revercomb's act will admit 200,000 nonquota refugees, but only those who flocked into Germany before December 22, 1945, will be eligible. This restriction automatically disqualifies 90 per cent of the Jews most of which fled into Germany to escape the Polish pogroms after December, 1945.

New Jersey's Alex Smith, scowling darkly, called upon the Republicans to clean up the act, and give no more comfort to Hitler's ghost. Senators John Cooper of Kentucky, Homer Ferguson of Michigan, and Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts joined him.

However, Missouri's Forrest Donnell backed up Revercomb and insisted that the subcommittee had been "open-minded" in writing the act.

Taft's Filibuster

Senate Boss Bob Taft was more concerned about breaking the Southern filibuster which he, himself, had brought on. It was Taft's idea to throw the Senate into a snarl over poll tax legislation to demonstrate the disunity in the Democratic Party. But at the caucus he wanted to clear the decks for the Senate windup.

The anti-poll-tax bill could be referred to the States for a constitutional amendment, Taft pointed out, or it could be withdrawn from the Senate floor.

The Southerners had indicated they would not filibuster the idea of a constitutional amendment, he said, but personally he was "inclined" to favor withdrawing the bill entirely.

New York's Irving Ives agreed it was too late to propose a constitutional amendment. This had already been suggested by the Democrats, he argued, and "all we would be doing by changing tactics at this late date is to pull their political chestnuts out of the fire."

The filibuster itself, he insisted, was more important an issue than poll tax.

"Four people could tie up this whole country in the most dire emergency by keeping a filibuster going in the Senate," Ives thundered. "The whole civil-rights program shrinks into insignificance alongside this."

Clyde Reed of Kansas argued that the Republicans were committed by the 1944 platform to submit the anti-poll-tax question to the States as a constitutional amendment, but President of the Senate Arthur Vandenberg joined Ives in insisting the most important issue was changing the Senate rules to do away with filibusters. This course was agreed upon unanimously by the caucus, and Senator Curley Brooks of Illinois was named to appoint a committee to study it.

'Cake' Stevenson

Former Gov. Coke Stevenson of Texas, who now aspires to be a Senator, won a new name for himself. Around Capitol Hill cloakrooms he is now called "Cake" Stevenson, because, when it comes to the Taft-Hartley Act and other controversial issues, Coke wants to have his cake and eat it too.

At two press conferences which the Texas solon himself initiated on a recent trip to Washington, he evaded more issues and dodged more questions than any recent performer in a city noted for question-dodging.

Stevenson has managed to make the American Federation of Labor think he is opposed to the Taft-Hartley Act, while making Texas businessmen think he is for it.

★ No. 18 IN A SERIES DEDICATED TO THE NATION'S CAPITAL, Washington ... ITS INSTITUTIONS AND ITS PEOPLE ★

and its people who staff our Nation's Storehouse of Knowledge

● The Library of Congress . . . today the largest in the world . . . built its tremendous collection around seven hundred forty volumes purchased in England in 1800 for £475. Fifteen years later the private library of Thomas Jefferson was purchased, more than doubling its size at that time, and making it the largest library in the land.

● The Library of Congress . . . operates a gigantic inter-library loan system . . . reaching all over our country. If a borrower wants a book owned by the Library of Congress . . . and it is not available elsewhere . . . he can borrow it through his nearest librarian. The Library of Congress is literally a National Library . . . serving all of our citizens.

● The Library of Congress . . . publishes the Union Catalog . . . an invaluable tool to book users from coast to coast. It contains about twelve million entries . . . covering almost every conceivable subject . . . and identifies the libraries where source material can be found. Thus, anyone can locate books relating to almost any subject.

● The Library of Congress . . . today contains almost eight million printed books and pamphlets . . . over a million and a half maps and views . . . over one million seven hundred thousand volumes and pieces of music . . . tens of thousands of microfilm reels and strips . . . over one hundred thousand photographic recordings . . . almost twelve thousand motion picture reels . . . and more than seven million nine hundred thousand manuscripts.

● The Library of Congress . . . to house its tremendous collection . . . occupies two buildings providing almost thirty-six acres of floor space . . . four hundred and fourteen miles of bookshelves . . . and provides twenty reading rooms for the convenience of the American people.

Operating our nation's Storehouse of Knowledge . . . the Library of Congress . . . are seventeen hundred skilled and conscientious workers, who dedicate themselves to providing members of Congress, the Supreme Court, all of our Federal agencies, and private citizens throughout the land with information necessary to carry on their work, answer their questions, enrich their cultural lives. Not only is it the largest library in the world . . . but the Library of Congress has also been called the best. It possesses one of the finest Chinese collections in existence, for example . . . containing much that is no longer to be found even in the Orient. Built not by one man alone . . . or a dozen . . . the Library is the result of the combined work of thousands who have served faithfully since its inception in 1800 . . . when our government had its headquarters in New York City. Today, the Library's responsibilities and scope of operations extend far beyond the dreams of its founders. It literally reaches out all over America . . . providing services for thousands of public and private libraries . . . furnishing books and other materials to those who need them. Its workers are experts . . . each contributing to the over-all efficiency of its gigantic plant . . . containing tens of millions of individual items . . . yet easily accessible to its users. The Hecht Company is proud to tender this salute to the people of the Library of Congress . . . who add so much to the cultural and intellectual life of our nation.
